Raise Poor's Power to Buy, Lubin Urges Trust Inquiry

Hearings Start
Economist Testifies
Sees New Market
Affects 'Lower Half'

By Robert C. Allbright.

Dr. Isadore Lubin, Government witness opening the President's $500,000 monopoly investigation, yesterday told industry it must turn to the lower income half of the population for markets and declared only an increase in income in this group could maintain and expand large-scale production.

The 42-year-old Labor Department statistician waded through charts and figures on production, employment and pay rolls to conclude that a rise in living standards is vital to win "economic security, not only for the worker, but for the investor and farmer."

Winding up a full day's testimony before the 12-man joint Congressional and Executive Committee, Lubin said industry could no longer count on large population increases to stimulate production, and "cannot maintain itself" on sales to 807,000 families earning over $5,000 annually. He said industry must gear itself to move goods into the homes of families earning less than $2,500 a year, numbering 54 per cent of the population.

$2.25 "Tremendous"

As a hypothetical case he suggested an increase of $2.25 a day in the income of approximately 5,200,000 nonrelief families earning less than $1,200 annually "would have a tremendous effect upon industry and employment."

"The outline of the demands that would be made upon American industry following even a moderate increase in the incomes of all families and single individuals now receiving less than $2,500 would in fact be almost unbelievable," he testified.

"Surplus capacity would disappear in the vast majority of our industries. In many of them, present capacity would run far short of the demands of our population."

Urges Rising Standard

"Are we moving toward that?" asked Chairman O'Mahoney.

Lubin said that recent rises in employment, pay rolls and production indices led him to believe "we are moving in that direction."

"We must get back to a rising standard of living," Lubin told the committee. "That means more production, but production that must be balanced so that we won't be producing too much of any one commodity, and it means more equitable distribution of commodities."

He used charts graphing performance of the economic system through the pre-war period, the post-war boom, the 1929 crash and

1 Killed, 1 Hurt As Blast Wrecks Adhesive Plant

Malden, Mass., Dec. 1 (U.P.).—One man was killed, another injured critically and several patients reportedly were thrown from beds in nearby Maplewood Hospital tonight when an explosion occurred in the W. W. Mathey shoe-cement factory.

Leonard Barrett, 28, of Saugus, was crushed to death under a wall that collapsed, and Frank Owen, 58, of Saugus, was hospitalized with a skull fracture, internal injuries and first-degree burns.

Baltimore Mail Seeks Sixth Ship

By the Associated Press.

Over the objection of competing operators, the Baltimore Mail Steamship Co. sought permission yesterday to inaugurate a weekly intercostal service by entering a sixth vessel in the New York-California trade.

It asked the Maritime Commission also for blanket authority to substitute additional ships when required to maintain an uninterrupted weekly schedule and for permission to charter the transatlantic liner Washington for a special roundtrip voyage in February.

Don't Stop

The executive committee of the Community Chest will meet today to consider several suggested plans to raise the $250,000 needed to bring the fund to the $2,127,000 mark—the sum that must be obtained if Washington's needy are to be cared for in 1939.

The committee is determined that Washington babies shall not go without milk; that the sick and aged shall not be neglected.

The committee is encouraged by the generous and unprecedented influx of voluntary and last-minute contributions, which yesterday totaled $30,000. The heaviest post-campaign pledging in five years greeted Chest executives yesterday.

A number of business firms, including The Washington Post, have started their campaigns over again to increase subscriptions. A large number of voluntary increases of contributions have been received.

The committee takes off its hat to the many thousands who have given to the limit of ability.

But it also feels that there are many others who will be happy to give when they realize that the Chest simply cannot take care of the unfortunates of this city 12 months next year unless the last $250,000 is contributed.

There can be no excuses for not taking care of hungry children, sick mothers, poverty-stricken families in Washington. Their condition and circumstances are not improved by turning away and forgetting about it. There they are in 57 institutions in this city for anyone to see.

The executives of the Chest know down to the last dime what is needed for care of Washington's needy.

That is why they are so grimly determined to get the last needed $250,000.

If you have not subscribed will you do so today?

If you can increase your subscription will you do so today?

Hospitals Open To 3 of 6 GHA Staff Doctors

Popular Notion in Error
Other Members Barred
Group Checks Accepted

Popular notions to the contrary, certain members of the medical staff of Group Health Association are being permitted to treat cases in some local hospitals, The Post learned yesterday.

Dr. Raymond E. Selders, medical director of GHA, has delivered four babies at Columbia Hospital in recent weeks.

Dr. Virginius Dabney, the clinic's ear, nose and throat specialist, has performed between 50 and 60 tonsillectomies at Episcopal Hospital since he joined the association's staff earlier in the year, it was estimated by W. C. Kirkpatrick, president of GHA.

Dr. Mario Scandiffio, pediatrician, may treat emergency cases at Children's Hospital and serve as a consultant in the other hospitals to which he was freely admitted before he joined the staff of the Government health agency, focal point of the current grand jury investigation of medical society practices.

In addition, Alexandria Hospital has granted Dr. Selders, who is a surgeon, permission to care for emergency cases, provided he patient is a resident of Virginia.

None of the other members of the clinic staff has hospital privileges, however, said Kirkpatrick. They include Drs. Clark W. Halstead, Charles J. Albright and R. F. Cahoon.

Taxpayer Urges Action

Yesterday's checkup, prompted by the District Commissioners receipt of a taxpayer's letter urging removal of hospitals from the tax-free property list because they discriminate against GHA members, revealed that only one institution refuses to admit group health clients as such.

"Sibley Hospital has consistently

U.S. Subsidizes 20-Million-Bu. Wheat Export

Goes to England
Losses Made Up
Details Withheld

By the Associated Press.

Sales of American wheat for export during the current season increased to a total of about 64,000,000 bushels with an Agriculture Department announcement yesterday that it had arranged for disposal of 20,000,000 bushels to British millers.

The British sales will be made under the Government's export subsidy program inaugurated in August to encourage the foreign sale of 100,000,000 bushels of the surplus bread grain before next July.

Officials said the wheat would be sold through American exporters with the Government taking the losses between domestic prices and lower world prices. On previous sales those losses have run as high as 22 cents a bushel, officials said.

Details Withheld

Except for the statement that the grain will be delivered over a period of several months, details of the British transaction were withheld.

Sales of wheat, including flour, for export between July 1 and November 15 were reported by the department at 43,200,000 bushels, 19,000,000 of which were sold at Government loss averaging 12½ cents a bushel.

Meanwhile railroads rejected yesterday a plea from Secretary Wallace for an emergency reduction in citrus freight rates, explaining the financial condition of rail lines was the most critical in their history.

A. F. Cleveland, vice president of the Association of American Railroads, told the Secretary in a letter that existing rates on citrus fruits were much lower than the maximum authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission and that citrus rate reductions would cause similar requests from producers of many other commodities.

$250 Required to End Despair Of 2 of City's Neediest Families

The Washington Post Christmas Fund this year will once again be devoted to the District's neediest families selected from the "unemployed employables"—decent families, deserving, honest, willing to work—but desperately in need of a helping hand. Each day, between now and Christmas, stories of these families—selected with the cooperation of member agencies of the District of Columbia Council of Social Agencies—will be printed. Read these stories. And then decide if you can help.

Family C consists of a woman and two daughters. The girls are 11 and 15 years old. All three share a six-room house with Mrs. C's sister. The husband of Family C deserted his wife and children several years ago. But Mrs. C, courageously maintaining a good standard of living, has kept her home together despite ill health and irregular employment. The present acute problem is due to a breakdown in Mrs. C's plan for the education, training and eventual employment of her elder daughter.

Temporary illness reduced Mrs. C's earning capacity, putting her in arrears with her daughter's training school costs. The girl will have to leave the school if the bill is not paid.

If it is paid, she will be able to finish her course and soon be contributing herself to the support of the family. Amount needed, $45.

Strikers Locked Out

By the United Press.

Paris, Dec. 1.—Discharge of about 700,000 French workers, or nearly 75 per cent of all those who joined yesterday's abortive general strike, tonight brought a fresh outbreak of labor troubles, necessitating use of troops in one instance.

Premier Daladier locked the strikers out of all nationalized arms plants and militarily requisitioned utilities, and most private industries immediately copied the government's swift reprisal.

At Saint Nazaire a general strike in shipyards and aviation factories was ordered for Friday morning as a result of the aviation plant lockouts and employers' refusal to receive union delegates.

Arms Plant Cleared

The Saint Nazaire shipyards operated today, with 150 workers discharged for their strike activities, but the aviation plants were closed under Daladier's orders.

The huge Schneider armaments plant at Le Havre was occupied by troops this evening after 3,000 workers gained entrance and declared a sit-down strike. The troops turned them out.

Daladier summoned Parliament to meet next Thursday to approve his labor reforms and "three-year-program" of recovery and ordered punitive action against Leon Jouhaux, chief of the General Labor Confederation who ordered the general strike.

Jouhaux to Lose Post

The government announced it would revoke the mandate of the "labor czar" as a regent of the Bank of France, one of his most remunerative posts, and the mandates of Pierre Semard and Emile Jarrigion, of the Railroad Workers' Confederation on the National Railway Board.

Daladier ordered sanctions carried out within three days against the 1,000 government employes who deserted their posts. They will be discharged, fined or sus-

300 Children Leave Reich for English Haven

Berlin, Dec. 1 (AP).—Jewish sources said 300 Jewish children up to 17 years of age were slated to leave Berlin, Hamburg and Vienna today for havens in England.

It was said they would go by way of the Netherlands and be placed in a "welcome camp" at Harwich, England, before being "sorted" for transfer to private families.

A committee of British Jews in Berlin disclosed plans to take some 5,000 to England in the near future.

Reliable informants in Vienna indicated about 1,100 young Jews recently obtained visas for emigration to Liberia.

Shanghai, Dec. 1.—Chinese pirates recently captured two Japanese commercial steamers in the Yangtze River and held their captains for ransom, the Shanghai Japanese daily newspaper Mainichi revealed today.

Both captured vessels belonged to Nishing Kisen Kaisa, the Japanese Steamship Line carrying most of the Yangtze trade. The steamship company paid 35,000 Chinese dollars ($5,600) for the release of one captain, while the second is held for $1,920 ransom.

Warring Case Due to Reach Jurors Today

2d Mistrial Plea Denied
Liar Charge Hurled
Arguments Heard

The brothers Warring staked their acquittal of criminal conspiracy today on six hours of earnest protest by their lawyers that their intentions were good.

The Treasury agents were the real conspirators, Attorney Harry T. Whelan told the woman and 11 men who will take the case after instructions from Justice Laws today. The Warrings and their tax expert wanted to find out what they owed and pay, Whelan said, but the agents were bent on sending the numbers gang to jail and did not act in good faith at all.

Former District Attorney Rover made a similar plea for Gordon L. R. Sadur, 39-year-old tax consultant who is charged with plotting with Emmitt, Leo Paul and Charles (Rags) Warring to conceal huge profits they got out of their $2,000,000-a-year racket. Their holding out of the income taxes on these hidden profits was a fraud on the Government, the prosecutors claim.

Arguments Take Day

Arguments took all day yesterday. Assistant District Attorney Wilson reviewed the evidence of the Government that Sadur and the Warrings conspired to hide the gang's income. An effort to hide the thousands of dollars the brothers paid in bribes to police, Wilson said, was the most convincing part of testimony.

"Sadur is a liar," Wilson said. "Sadur is a cheat. Sadur is a crook.

Nazis Accuse U. S. Jewry of 'Policy of Hate'

Berlin, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Nazis accused American Jewry tonight of being interested only in a "policy of hate" against Germany and refusing to extend real practical aid to the Reich's 700,000 Jews caught in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's newest anti-Semitic drive. The charge appeared in the mouthpiece of Propaganda Minister Goebbels, the newspaper Der Angriff.

Simultaneously, Germany sent a routine acknowledgement of receipt of the American note of last week asking assurances regarding American Jews, saying it had been brought to the attention of the competent authorities and an answer might be expected in the future.

More anti-Jewish decrees continued to flow from the government ministries, bringing closer Hitler's promised "final and complete solution of the Jewish question."

Australia Opens Door

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Australia is prepared to admit 15,000 German Jewish refugees within the next three years, Interior Minister McEwen told the House of Representatives today. Preference would be given to those capable of establishing new industries, he said.

'The Defense' Gets Inning in Dies Hearing

Martin of C.I.O. Testifies
Assails Murphy Critic
Attack on Probe 'Cut'

By Sidney Olson.

For the first time in approximately 16 weeks of almost daily hearings, the Dies committee investigating un-American activities yesterday heard testimony from an "opposition witness," Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Chairman Martin Dies, of Texas, deviated from the committee's usual practice of hearing only accusations of alleged un-American activities to permit Martin to defend his organization against repeated attacks from previous witnesses.

Dies, however, first forced Martin to omit the first page of his prepared statement, telling him before the hearings opened that the committee would not stand for testimony attacking its methods or objectives.

Martin then proceeded with the rest of his statement, in which he made three major charges:

That Judge Paul V. Gadola of Genesee County, Michigan, who previously testified that Governor Frank Murphy was guilty of treasonable activities" in the sit-down strikes of 1937, was a "known labor-hater," and was reported to have "very close connections with the Fascist movement in Michigan."

That the American Federation of Labor was as "equally cursed with the incubus of Communism" as the C. I. O.

That Giacomo Ungarelli, Italian vice consul in Detroit in 1934, had striven to promote Fascism among Italians of that city, had used "threats of physical violence" and "economic boycotts" to whip Italian-Americans into line under Premier Mussolini, and had

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City Dec. 1 (AP).—Speeding through a snowstorm a freight train demolished a suburban high school bus near here today, killing more than a score of children and the bus driver.

Twenty-one bodies were brought to the Salt Lake General Hospital and five mangled bodies were believed to be at mortuaries near the scene. Four or five of the 12 children injured critically may die.

The accident was one of the worst of its kind in the Nation's history.

Sixty-one pupils from the school district served by the bus were absent from Jordan High School. School officials said some may have remained at home because of the storm. Most estimates were the bus carried about 40 passengers ranging in age from 12 to 16.

The complete list of victims, hospital authorities said, cannot be ascertained until relatives have reported missing children and school rolls have been checked.

The condition of the bodies made identification in many cases almost impossible. Driver Farrold Silcox, 28, was believed to have been the only adult on the bus.

The disaster occurred at 8:56 a. m., M. S. T. (10:56 a. m., E. S. T.), near suburban Midvale, 10 miles south of here, as the bus was en route to Jordan High School.

E. L. Rehmer, engineer of "The Flying Ute," fastest freight train of the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad, told Sheriff S. Grant Young the train was running almost two hours late because of the storm. It was due here from Denver at 7 a. m.

Rehmer said he was on the right side of the cab and did not see the bus, coming from the left, but Fireman Alfred Elton cried out for him to stop.

Young said the train normally passed the crossing at a speed of

Youth Denies 'Confession' of Killing Farmer

Statement Admitted
At Prince Frederick
Defendant on Stand

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A Staff Correspondent.

Prince Frederick, Md., Dec. 1.—Walter Stinnett, 24-year-old farm hand, took the stand in his own defense tonight, denied a purported confession to police of the murder last July 11 of Warren Gantt, wealthy, middle-aged farmer of Port Republic, and said the crime was committed while he and two young women were struggling for a gun one of them had pointed at Gantt.

He described himself as "absolutely drunk" at the time and in earlier testimony gave details of a long midsummer drinking bout in which Stinnett, the young women and Gantt participated.

His statement named Margaret Abell, 19, Prince Frederick, who is to be tried later on a charge of murdering Gantt, as pointing a gun at Gantt as he sprawled asleep headdown on his back with part of his body in his car. The car was parked near the Gantt home the morning after the drinking party, Stinnett said.

"We all went after the gun," Stinnett said in halting syllables. "All hands were pulling after the gun and it went off. I don't know who pulled the trigger.

"I went to Gantt and called to him. Margaret said, 'It's no use, he's dead.' I was too drunk to drive and Margaret took the wheel."

Stinnett's testimony came after State's Attorney Arthur W. Dowell succeeded in having the defendant's alleged confession to Washington authorities admitted as part of the trial record.

In the purported confession Stinnett first blamed the women for the crime, then admitted firing "two or three times" at the prostrate Gantt and, finally, blurted out.

"I did all the shooting."

Hysterical, Clothes Torn, She Staggers To House

Can Identify 3 Men
Cannot Give Names
Knocked Her Out
Held 30 Hours

Mary Brown, 18-year-old convent student, was returned to her home at Oxon Hill, Md., last night at 10:40 o'clock after being in the hands of three kidnapers since 4:30 p. m. Wednesday.

She staggered to the front door of her home from a spot a few hundred yards from where she was abducted. Her clothing was ripped and torn to shreds.

Has Many Bruises

She was hatless and her hair dishevelled. Bruises covered her scarred and battered body.

Hysterical and terrified, she was unable to give a coherent account of what had been done to her since she disappeared.

She was dropped from the kidnapers' truck in the middle of a farm adjoining her father's. This farm fronts Box road, on which she was seized.

The girl, though she was unable to describe the men, sobbed that she could identify them.

The first person to see the girl in her home was Robert L. Manning, a retired Washington detective and friend of the family, who had volunteered to keep watch in the home after he had urged them to get some rest.

She Looked Terrible"

"I was sitting at the telephone," said Manning, "when the door burst open and the girl walked in. I jumped up.

"She fell in my arms and I carried her into the dining room and put a coat over her. She looked terrible.

"Her clothes were torn. She was almost nude and her hair was all mussed up.

"She said three men had held her prisoner all night long. They had knocked her out and thrown her on a mattress. I asked her if she had been attacked and she said she had not been.

"She said she was blindfolded all the time they held her but knew one of the men had a mustache."

Family Were Asleep

Manning said all the family was asleep when the girl returned. They were called at once and her father, frantic with grief since her disappearance, rushed down the stairs to take her in his arms. Mrs. Brown, then the rest of the family, embraced the girl by turn.

Within less than an hour after Mary appeared so many friends, neighbors and morbidly curious rushed to her home that traffic was jammed more than a mile. Prince Georges police called for reinforcements.

Mary was put to bed at once and the family physician was brought to the home by Margaret Brown, eldest sister.

Three possemen were guarding the gate when Mary returned. They did not recognize the pitiful figure struggling up the knoll toward them until a relative with them described the girl for whom police and citizens of three States were searching.

Earlier two itinerant fruit peddlers, believed to be from the District, were sought in the gidnaping, when police were informed by The Post the men were seen twice in the vicinity the day the girl was seized.

The peddlers drove a black panel truck. Lucy, Mary's sister, who

DuPont Fears Incentive Tax 'Bureaucracy'

Opposes Profit Sharing Prefers High Wages Gannett Favors System

By the Associated Press.

Lammot duPont, widely known industrialist, told the Senate committee on profit sharing yesterday that business was still afraid of what government might do to it and as a result was lagging in enterprise.

The president of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. testified he was opposed to incentive taxation to encourage industrial profit sharing because he feared "there would be danger of too much administrative interpretation' of such tax laws and of consequent bureaucratic 'interference with the condust of business enterprise."

He said that "once the principle is established, it can readily be used for ends definitely harmful to business—thus creating even greater uncertainty."

Instead of profit-sharing systems, duPont favored "high wages based on efficient performance."

Other Witnesses Disagree

In taking a stand against both profit-sharing systems and incentive taxation, he differed with three other witnesses who appeared before the committee during the day.

Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher of the Gannett newspapers; A. L. Marsh, Detroit manufacturer, and Willford I. King, New York University professor, all indorsed the principles of profit sharing and incentive taxation to encourage it.

Gannett asserted that the operation of profit-sharing systems on his newspapers had proved a bulwark against labor disturbances and had increased efficiency and profits.

Talking to reporters after the hearing, duPont said he did not believe business was prepared to take up the slack in employment that would be occasioned by a sudden cessation in Government spending.

Urges Progressive Taxation

Nevertheless, he said he thought a start should be made toward economy in that portion of the Government budget not represented by relief appropriations. He blamed high taxes and the fear of possible future punitive taxation for lack of business enterprise.

DuPont told the committee the best tax "incentive" for business would be a simplification of the tax laws, "reasonable" freedom from frequent changes in these laws and the lowest possible tax rate, based on economically administered Government activities."

Taxation should be for revenue only, he said.

Finally," he added, "there should be a tax system both for individuals and corporations which does not penalize success through progressively higher rates as the income increases, but which recognizes that under our competitive system profits are unusually large only where the risks have been great, and management is sound and progressive."

$20,000,000 Paid Out

DuPont said his company paid out approximately $20,131,000, of $50,000,000 in net profits, in benefits for employes during 1937, of which $7,693,000 represented cash payments to employes for meritorious work.

"As one who is critical of profit-sharing you are one of the best profit-sharers I ever saw," observed Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

"Think how good we could do if we believed in it," duPont replied.

DuPont told reporters he thought the national labor relations act should be amended to permit employers to discuss labor conditions with their employes.

Cautious of Labor Law

"An employer ought to be able to talk things over with his employes and they ought to be able to talk back," he declared, observing that the law's provision against coercion of employes had been interpreted so as virtually to prohibit such conversations.

The committee heard similar criticisms from Marsh, who said he did not talk to his men any more about his firm's profit-sharing system "because I understand it's against the law—you might influence them against joining a union."

Marsh said the C.I.O. had attempted to organize his plant, but had failed.

Prof. King outlined to the committee a flexible wage scale for industry, by which labor and capital would obtain a fixed portion of the gross income of the business.

Grants Resumed To Ohio for Aged

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board announced yesterday resumption of Federal grants to Ohio's 112,000 old age pensioners.

The board said the Ohio division of aid for the aged had made "corrections" in its administration. The board, in a controversy with Gov. Martin L. Davey, had cut off the grants, demanding reorganization of the administration of the State division.

Dies Grills First 'Witness For Defense'

Dies

finally been recalled by Rome under pressure.

After his statement had been read, Martin was closely questioned throughout the rest of the day by Chairman Dies. Uusually Dies lolls in his chair, fiddling with a cigar, and interrupting the witness' charges that such-and-such are communists only to spell out the names for the reporters.

But yesterday Dies, leaning forward, barked a rapid-fire stream of questions at the scholarly-appearing young labor leader, demanding "Yes-or-no answers," scrupulously checking up each vague statement, and throughout insisting that Martin answer "of your own knowledge."

Martin commented dryly on this new rigor of procedure after the hearings, saying:

"I see the committee has had a new birth, at least as far as technical procedure goes."

Martin also admitted to reporters that the series of attacks on Murphy by witnesses before the committee had played a "major part" in defeating Murphy for re-election last November 8.

Martin charged that Judge Gadola, "according to reliable reports," had participated in meetings held to raise funds to aid Mussolini in the seizure of Ethiopia, and that at one time "Judge Gadola showed his respect for the Chief Executive of the State of Michigan by telling him to go to hell."

Martin said, in the portion of his statement that was not made part of the record, that only his respect for the law of the land had caused him to appear under subpena. He said:

"This committee had not functioned very long when it became manifest that its alleged objectives were being missed and that by the ill-prepared and loose presentation of reckless statements by irresponsible witnesses, grave doubts were being created as to the reliability and veracity of the charges made.

"Moreover, the unfortunate parade of questionable witnesses by whom outstanding patriotic and law-abiding citizens were attacked indiscriminately and charged with being communists created a definite feeling, universally entertained, that the committee would not and could not make any real contribution to the solution of the problem."

Martin expressed redoubled determination to make this statement after it had been suppressed by Dies.

In his wrangles with Dies, the former minister insisted that most communists in the C. I. O. had been ousted, but said, Harry Bridges, C. I. O. west coast leader, was a communist. He added:

"Some of the screwballs that have testified here have not been any asset to the committee."

"Name one!" roared Dies.

"Ralph Knox, former president of a C. I. O. local, and Judge Gadola," snapped Martin.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Whereas the November election pushed into top rank several new presidential possibilities in the Republican party — notably Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, and Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, —it brought into the limelight virtually no new Democratic candidates with any substantial national following.

GALLUP.

To test whether sentiment for prospective Democratic candidates has changed since the election, the American Institute of Public Opinion questioned a cross-section of Democratic voters in all States. They were asked to name the candidate they would favor in 1940 if President Roosevelt does not run. No lists were presented; hence the replies were entirely spontaneous.

The results show that Vice President John N. Garner is the leading choice, with Secretary Cordell Hull second. These two have been top choices of the rank and file in Institute surveys since early last spring.

In third and fourth position, respectively, are Postmaster General James A. Farley, who received prominent mention in previous Institute studies, and Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, taken place since the November election, when he was returned to office by a huge majority.

Following are the ten leading choices in today's study as compared to the ten leaders in a survey conducted just before the November election.

Before Election	Today

2. Farley	2. Hull
3. Hull	3. Farley
4. McNutt	4. Clark
5. Earle	5. Lehman
6. Ambassador Kennedy	6. McNutt
7. Wallace	7. Barkley
8. Lehman	8. Murphy
9. Murphy	9. Hopkins
10. Barkley	10. Ambassador Kennedy

The most notable rises in popularity have been those of Secretary Hull, who moved from third place to second place, Senator Clark, who was not among the leading ten before election, and is today in fourth place, and Gov. Lehman, who moved from eighth to fifth place.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, who is widely regarded by many New Dealers in Washington as a logical choice, ranks near the bottom of the list.

Senator Robert F. Wagner and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, each received enough mentions to put them among the second five in the list. Wagner, however, is ineligible for the presidency, having been born in Germany, and LaGuardia, though sympathetic toward the New Deal, is not a registered Democrat.

It is a significant fact that more Democratic voters favor President Roosevelt for a third term than any of the prospective candidates named in the current survey.

The Institute's last test of third term sentiment, before the election, found approximately one-half (47 per cent) of Democrats indorsing Roosevelt for a third term.

By contrast, the highest single vote for any other prospective candidate, Vice President Garner, is only 20 per cent of those who expressed a definite choice for 1940. Secretary Hull, the second choice, receives 11 per cent, and Farley 10 per cent, while the others have less than 9 per cent.

But at the present time it seems clear that the Democratic situation is pretty much an open field, with no one candiate having enough of a popular following to put him very far in front.

The Republican party picture, on the other hand, is radically different. Sentiment is more crystallized. A recent Institute survey found, for example, that one-third of the Republican voters with definite opinions on 1940 favor Dewey.

Roosevelt Sets January 3 for His Message

To Give It in Person Talks With Bankhead Also Sees Hopkins

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 1.—President Roosevelt and Speaker Bankhead surveyed the congressional outlook and the international situation today and announced that the President would deliver his annual message to Congress January 3.

Beyond that, all they would say was that they talked about "cabbages and kings."

"We talked about cabbages and kings—and whatever the rest of the quotation is," said the Speaker. "Of shoes and sealing wax," supplied the President, laughing.

All Sweet and Smooth

In the same joking spirit, the President said they had discussed international as well as national affairs, and the public would know all about it January 3 and not before.

He added the talk covered the whole range of prospective legislation and everything was sweet and smooth.

Asked whether a special message would be sent on the big defense program now under expert study, Mr. Roosevelt said he could not say how that subject would be treated because he had yet to begin writing his message.

He shied away from questions whether he would make another attempt to get through a Government reorganization bill. Specific bills would not be discussed at this time, he emphasized.

Committee Posts Discussed

Asked for a list of "must" bills for the new session, the President replied there was no such thing, and never had been.

Committee appointments and Senate and House organization in general were understood to have been discussed. Bankhead said before the conference he expected to take up the House Rules Committee chairmanship left vacant with the defeat, in which the President lent a hand, of Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York.

After seeing Bankhead off to Atlanta, the President drove to the foundation swimming pool, then to the United States Marine guard camp, to lunch on rolls and baked beans with Lieut. Col. Charles T. Brooks and other officers.

Confers With Hopkins

Late in the day the President conferred with Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator. William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, who has been vacationing in the Bahamas, arrived before nightfall, but his call was described as largely personal.

In the same category was placed the call of Frank C. Walker, of New York, former director of the National Emergency Council, who came here for a few days of recreation.

Ickes Considers Plea to Run for Mayor of Chicago

Secretary of the Interior Ickes admitted yesterday that he is toying with the idea of becoming a Democratic candidate for the post of Chicago's mayor.

He told reporters that many friends from all groups had urged him to make the campaign next year. He said

"I have a pretty interesting job here. But the Chicago mayoralty is one of the biggest jobs in the country. There is a tremendous job to be done there."

Ickes, the "Squire of Olney, Md.," since his marriage last summer and purchase of an estate there, does not have even voting residence in Chicago. He actually is a voting resident of Winnetka, Ill., a Chicago suburb.

Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

The Works Progress Administration disclosed yesterday it had employed William E. Dodd, jr., unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Eighth Virginia District, as an assistant in its personnel division here.

DODD

Dodd ran in the primary as a 100 per cent New Dealer against Representative Howard Smith.

Representative Sumners (Democrat), Texas, proposed yesterday that general elections be held in October instead of November. The fact that Presidential inaugurations now take place in January instead of March allows little time for all the electoral college formalities, he pointed out.

Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee conferred yesterday with party leaders from Iowa and Indiana on the advisability of contesting the election victories of Democratic Senators in those States.

A spokesman said Hamilton requested a formal outline of the proposals before deciding whether the national committee should give financial support.

Harrison Spangler, national committeeman, and Clyde Charlton, counsel Sate central committee, spoke for Iowa. Will Irwin, Indiana national committeeman, represented his State.

Former Senator Lester J. Dickinson lost a close race to Senator Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, and Raymond Willis, a country editor, was defeated by Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana.

Arthur L. Johnson, executive secretary of the General Welfare Federation of America, yesterday asked all candidates for the House minority leadership to assert their stand as to obtaining hearings on and passage of the Federation's old age pension plan.

Johnson said Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, one candidate favored principles in the bill, and sought expressions from James W. Wadsworth, sr., of New York; Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan; Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ohio, and William J. Ditton, of Pennsylvania, all mentioned in connection with the leadership.

The Democratic National Committee set out yesterday to raise $500,000 by January 8, through $100, $50 and $25 contributions on a big scale in every State in the country. The contributors will be guests at a series of Jackson Day dinners which will be held on January 7, a day ahead of Andrew Jackson Day, on Sunday next month.

The $100 contributors will be seated at the dinner here, which will be adddressed by President Roosevelt. Postmaster General Farley will introduce him. The $50 dinner will be in New York City and the $25 dinners will be the rule elsewhere.

Experts Missing At Blimp Hearing

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today continued the hearing on a rule issued against the National Airport of Washington to show cause why a blimp hangar should not be removed from the field. Several expert witnesses failed to appear.

Counsel for the airport explained that the lease on the hangar now rented to the Goodyear Rubber Co., would expire in October, 1939, and that at that time it would be removed if the commission so ordered. Airlines have charged that the hangar constitutes a hazard to aviation.

McIntire Takes Oath Of Navy Surgeon Chief

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 1 (AP).—Capt. Ross T. McIntire, the White House physician, took the oath here today as surgeon general of the Navy, succeeding Rear Admiral Percival S. Rossiter, retired.

A fellow officer in President Roosevelt's entourage, Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, Naval aide, swore in McIntire, who thus became a rear admiral advancing from a permanent rank of commander. His captaincy was only temporary while he was stationed at the White House.

Eccles Warns Against Rapid Spending Cut

Opposes Swift Tax Rise
Urges Gradual Economy
Fears Recession Return

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 1.—Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, a prominent Presidential adviser, said tonight the Government should beware of reducing its spending program prematurely or of increasing tax rates.

A too rapid step toward budget balancing, he indicated, might bring on another business recession such as the one from which the country now is recuperating.

Eccles, who is reputed to be the principal author of the present Administration policy of deficit spending, told a New York bankers' meeting:

"An attempt to cut down expenditure, whether private or public, before we have reached a national income reflecting reasonably full use of our manpower and productive facilities would be a very short-sighted repetition of a mistake which has been made before."

National Income Too Low

Compared with an estimated national income of about $65,000,000,000 this year, Eccles said the country needed $88,000,000,000 to attain normality in business and Government finance.

Other Administration officials already have hinted that the next fiscal year's deficit probably will not be much lower than the estimated $4,000,000,000 of the present year because increases in national defense expenditures may offset reductions in relief spending.

The budget, Eccles explained, will balance itself almost automatically, if well-timed Federal expenditures increase the national income, because higher national income will increase tax receipts without a rise in tax rates.

Increasing national income, instead of cutting expenditures or increasing tax rates, he said, "is the one sure way and only way in which we can achieve the balanced budgets which we all wish to achieve."

Cites Past Experience

"When deflation has been arrested," he said, "we must adapt policy to sustaining an orderly recovery, avoiding the pitfalls recently experienced as a result of excessive inventory accumulation and excessive extension of consumer credit in relation to net income, of inadequate capital expenditures in such basic industries as railroads, housing and utilities, and of wrong timing of public with private expenditures in 1936 and the Government's too sharp withdrawal of funds from the spending stream in 1937.

"We must better understand the bad effects of unbalanced price conditions, whether resulting from ill-advised price, wage and hour policies of labor and industry or from other causes, such as a failure to sustain agricultural income.

"We must recognize that taxation policy should be closely integrated with monetary and fiscal policy—that taxation is not a separate matter concerned only with the raising of revenue, but that the type, the timing and effect of taxation upon the stimulation of private enterprise or upon restraint, if a speculative boom threatens, must be considered.

Calls Tax Policy Backward

"In the past we have applied taxation policy with perverse effects upon the economy, by trying to increase or at least failing to decrease taxation in depression when the burden becomes insupportable and by reducing taxes in boom times when we should retain or increase taxes as a means of needed restraint."

Philip A. Benson, newly elected president of the American Bankers Association and president of the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, told the bankers:

"The day for speculative profits for commercial banking appears to be a thing of the past. Banking must be conducted with a scientific and more economical technique than ever before . . . Because the margin between operating earnings and operating expenses has been greatly narrowed . . .

"Since there have been great changes in the courses outside of banking from which the demand for bank loans has traditionally come, it also may be necessary for the banks to consider the advisability of adapting themselves to these conditions through broadened loan policies of a character which depart in no degree, however, from the principles of sound banking practice."

about 60 miles an hour. Silcox, the sheriff said, apparently stopped the bus at the crossing and then started it up again. The locomotive hit it broadside, bending the big bus around the front of it.

Bodies were strewn along the right of way for half a mile before the heavy rain stopped.

Crowds of weeping, shrieking mothers, fathers and classmates soon gathered at the scene. Pitiful attempts were made to identify the dead.

One of the survivors was Margie Groves, 16, of South Jordan.

"I got on the bus at 8:30 about 2 miles from the crossing," she said. "There must have been about 40 others in the bus with me.

Bus Was Halted

"When we came to the crossing, we stopped and Mr. Silcox, the bus driver, started up again. I thought I heard someone yell 'Train!' and then I saw something black coming from the right and it hit us.

"When I woke up I was lying in the snow near the bus. Two students I knew, Mack Bateman and Mabel Smith, were nearby. Mabel was lying near the bus and Mack was lying by a fence. I guess they're all right now.

"There was an awful lot of screaming and moaning. They were all just kids.

"And then they came and brought me to a hospital."

David Witter, of Denver, riding on an oil tank close to the freight engine, said, "It was the awfulest thing I ever saw."

"None of them seemed to die right away. One by one they would stop screaming."

The 85-car freight train, half a mile long, was traveling so fast the caboose was on the crossing by the time it stopped, said Dr. J. S. Alley, of Midvale, who brought victims to the hospital.

"The cab of the bus was tossed to one side, about 100 feet from the crossing," he said. "Bodies were strewn everywhere a mile down the track."

Most of the victims were from Bluffdale, Riverton, South Jordan, Crescent and Herriman, small communities a few miles south of Salt Lake City.

Saw Bus Stop

June Wynn, 16, who was standing in the doorway of her home 300 yards from the crossing, said, "I saw the bus and the train coming and wondered whether the bus was going to stop. It did stop, and then pulled onto the track directly in front of the train.

"I heard the crash, then screams. When the front of the train got opposite me, I could see the frame of the bus still on the engine.

"The train started slowing down immediately. My father and I rushed to the track, and trainmen told us to go back and call ambulances.

"It was foggy and snowing. I wouldn't have been able to see the train or bus if they both hadn't had their lights on. I did not hear the train whistle."

Of survivors admitted at the hospital, 1 died, 5 were sent home after first-aid treatment, and 14 remained at the hospital.

Gov. Henry H. Blood issued a proclamation of sympathy for the grief-stricken families, and separate State and county investigations were ordered.

W. K. Granger, State public service commissioner, said the crossing often had been considered for a train-actuated signal, but installation had been delayed because the road was so infrequently traveled.

Road-Builders Urge National Highway Plan

Cite German System
Accident Tolls Cut
Lane Division Helps

Highway planning on a national scale, modeled after the German autobahn system yesterday was urged as a logical program for this country in an address by C. H. Upham, engineer director of the American Road Builders Association, before the eighteenth annual meeting of the Highway Research Board.

Germany's new network of roads, according to Upham, who investigated the system last summer, has reduced the traffic accident toll in Germany by 83 per cent.

Traffic Lanes Separated

With the two streams of traffic separated by a grass strip, all pedestrians, cyclists and horse-drawn vehicles excluded and grade crossings eliminated, he pointed out, the autobahn permits speed with less danger.

A similar road system should serve traffic from Boston to Washington and New York to Chicago, Upham declared, under a "master plan" which may require 25 to 50 years to develop.

He advocated that plan should be based on a thorough study of present highway volume.

The safety value of sidewalks on highways was stressed in a report by George H. Delano, chief engineer of the Massachusetts department of public works.

Safeguards Pedestrian

Between 1935 and 1937, on highways where the new sidewalks were in use, accidents involving pedestrians decreased 24 per cent, Delano reported.

Murray D. Van Wagoner, Michigan State highway commissioner, told delegates that a far-reaching roadside development program has contributed much to Michigan's tourist business, second largest industry in the State.

'Confession' Of Md. Killing Read to Jury

Murder

land town was packed with at least 500 spectators. Several hundred more sat in their cars or loitered outside.

As Stinnett heard the three-judge court rule his alleged confession as admissable, he almost collapsed. His face turned ashen and his head dropped to his chest. He braced himself by clasping the sides of his chair.

Four confessions were brought into the trial as attorneys for defense and Dowel fought over their admissability. Two were alleged to have been to authorities in Washington by Mrs. Abell and Mrs. Evelyn Bajowski, 18, Baltimore, companions of Stinnett and Gantt on the drinking party.

The court—Judges William C. Mattingly, William A. Mitchell and William A. Loker—ruled out confessions purportedly made by the girls and a third one alleged to have been made jointly by Stinnett and the women, who are also charged with murder and will be tried separately.

The confession, as read by Dowell, said Stinnett, who will be 25 next month, had been married for three years, attended school only through the sixth grade and had been a friend and employe of the murdered man for about 14 years.

Drinking Bout Described

It related details of the drinking bout with the young women which finally adjourned to the Gantt home on the night before the murder. Then it gave three versions of the shooting. The first was that Gantt was shot by one of the women as he lay dead drunk, half in and half out of his car, parked near the home. In the confession Stinnett was quoted as saying:

"Margaret fired a gun."

The police interrogators stopped the questioning at this point, Dowell said, and told Stinnett the others had confessed and to "tell the truth." Dowell quoted Stinnett as then saying:

"She (Margaret) shot him. Betty (Mrs. Bajowski) grabbed the gun from her. I grabbed the gun from Betty, and I shot him (Gantt) two or three times."

Still later in the confession, Dowell quoted Stinnett as saying:

"I did all the shooting . . . We were poor people, and we wanted money."

Stinnett's confession said he tried to wreck Gantt's car as the three were fleeing the murder scene, but the machine failed to turn over as he drove up an embankment. Near Washington, the confession stated, the three were talking of earlier events. It quoted Margaret:

"What in the world did we do it for?" And Stinnett:

"It is done. It is your fault. But it's done. I helped you do it, and it's done, that's all."

Stinnett allegedly told police the shooting occurred after the young women approached him to get Gantt's bankroll which the farmer had flashed during the spree and which authorities estimated at $1,000.

Highlight of the testimony was the statement by Charles W. Magaha, Maryland State policeman, quoting Stinnett as saying, while in the office of Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner of the District, on July 13, following arrest of the trio at the beach resort:

"I am guilty. But what about the gun? Those two girls got the gun."

Mrs. Abell will be tried in this place while Mrs. Bajowski will be tried in Frederick County.

A night session was made necessary by protests of defense attorneys against admission of the purported confession. Court adjourns after Stinnett's testimony until 9:30 a. m. today.

Tells of Arrests

Magaha told the jury that confessions had been obtained from all three defendants in the office of Dr. Rosenberg in Washington.

Gerald Sonnenberg, son of the proprietor of the beach resort, testified to the arrest of Stinnett and the women. He said they presented checks in payment for food and drink at the resort, and while an effort was being made to contact State police, disappeared. Later, they came back, he testified, and were arrested.

Blanche Stinnett, wife of the accused youth, is awaiting sentence for the theft of $960 from Gantt's estate.

Dowell told the jury that Gantt and Stinnett met the two girls on July 10. They spent the night of July 10 at Gantt's farm, he declared, after having visited taverns throughout the country, where they did considerable drinking.

Mr. M was under the care of doctors with a weak heart.

Last summer, the doctors decided that Mr. M was sufficiently cured to be able to do light work. As a result, he was immediately classified as an "employable," ineligible for public relief.

Dropped from the relief rolls, Family M struggled through the next two months with assistance from friends, little better off than they. Then Mr. M got a construction job—but nine days later was carried home from work that was too strenuous for his heart and again put in bed. With the house poorly heated, he contracted pneumonia and is now recuperating at the home of a relative.

Children Need Clothes

Mrs. M should have had an operation six months ago, but the situation has been so desperate that she has kept on with her part-time jobs, despite her physical condition. At present, the four children are out of school because of insufficient clothing, the rent is three months in arrears and both Mr. and Mrs. M are ill.

The agency that recommends the case believes that the M Family can be salvaged, made self-supporting, if helped in time.

A housekeeper is needed for the home while Mrs. M is in the hospital and while she is recuperating. Funds are needed to pay for this and to meet the family's expenses until Mrs. M is fit to work and until Mr. M can find work which he can do. Amount needed, $160.

Contributions may be mailed to The Washington Post's Neediest Families Fund, or left in the Neediest Families Fund Box at the counter on the first floor of The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest.

Kaplan, Mrs. Rush Capture Bridge Championship

Cleveland, Dec. 1, (AP).—A 34-year-old New York lawyer and the wife of a collar company sales manager from the same city won the American Contract Bridge League's National mixed pair championship tonight, when, Fred D. Kaplan, paired with Mrs. Sam Rush, finished more than six points ahead of another New York combination.

Their nearest competitors in a field of 122 starting players were Mrs. Lottie Zetosch and R. L. Appleyard.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Jeff Myers from Cleveland were third. These exponents of the Boland Club system had 300 points, compared with 317.8 for the victors and 311.2 for the runners-up, who both used a variation of the Culbertson system.

Woman Slayer's Son Pleads for Her

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Thirteen-year-old Oscar Hahn pleaded solemnly for five minutes today for Gov. Davey to spare the life of his mother, Anna Marie Hahn, Cincinnati poison murderess condemned to die in Ohio's electric chair December 7.

Daniel S. Earhart, Davey's executive secretary, said he probably would not submit his report on the clemency hearing to the Governor before Monday.

Carl M. Distler, of Baltimore, was elected president; the Rev. Gustav R. H. Bechtold, of Philadelphia, vice president; the Rev. G. Morris Smith, of Susquahanna University, secretary; the Rev. Clarence R. Krumbholz, of New York, executive secretary, and Carl H. Lammers, of Brooklyn, treasurer.

refused to admit GHA members if they identify themselves that way," said Dr. Selders. "But our people can get in if they pay their bill as an unattached individual. Checks made out by GHA, even though certified, are not accepted."

All other hospitals accept the association's checks and so do practically all of the private doctors whom group health members have had to engage in order to obtain hospitalization, he added.

Dr. Scandiffio, who was expelled from the District Medical Society because of his affiliation with GHA, is in an odd predicament. Although he has never been officially informed that his professional services are no longer welcome at the hospitals in which he formerly practiced, it is "understood" that they don't care to have him treat cases there.

Emergency Consultation Only

These hospitals are Children's, Columbia, Garfield, Sibley, Georgetown, Providence and George Washington. Exceptions to the "unofficial" blacklist are that Dr. Scandiffio may treat a case at Children's if he signs a statement that it is an emergency, and he is permitted to work in the other hospitals in the capacity of consultant.

Dr. Dabney's situation is just as unusual. Veteran of over a quarter century of private practice in Washington when he joined the GHA staff this year, he retains his privileges at Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

"When he brings in his tonsillectomy cases he does not describe them as members of Group Health Association," Kirkpatrick said. "The hospital, of course, knows they are. When a doctor has been a staff man for some 25 years it is a bit awkward to cut him loose just because he joined an enterprise such as ours."

Other doctors and hospital officials likewise agree that the whole situation is awkward.

ed accountant. Don't be fooled by this story that they don't know about the books. Don't be fooled by this soft-voiced representative of the Warring mob . . ."

"Just a minute," Whelan broke in, "If your honor please. That is a prejudicial statement. No instruction from your honor could remove its harmful effect on the jury, any more than if a drop of ink were spilled in a glass of milk your honor could undertake to get out all of the ink. I move for the withdrawal of a juror and a mistrial."

Motion Refused

"The motion is denied," Justice Laws ruled. "Proceed, Mr. Wilson." This was the second defense effort to have a mistrial declared.

Whelan arraigned the Government agents, in his own speech, as proceeding against the Warrings on tax charges because they could not convict them of running a numbers lottery.

Rover, who is defending Sadur only, affected a more charitable view toward H. Watson Leese and William H. F. Swain, Internal Revenue agents whose lapses of memory he indicted again and again. They were busy men, he said, and they forgot things just as Sadur did. But, Rover said, although he did not think Swain and Leese were lying their testimony ought not to be believed against Sadur's.

District Attorney Pine will close the Government's argument in an hour and a half this morning. Justice Laws will take about an hour to instruct the jury on the law of conspiracy and to explain his views of the evidence offered by the prosecutors and by Sadur, the only defense witness. The jurors probably will begin their deliberations about noon.

Mail Fraud Charge Halts Man's Plan To Wed Film Star

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—William P. Buckner's announced plan to fly to California and marry Loretta Young, movie actress, was stalled tonight when he was arrested on a mail fraud charge on arrival here aboard the liner Queen Mary.

He asked Federal officers for permission to go to California on a promise to return here to face the accusation of defrauding bondholders of the Philippine Railway Co. of a total that Assistant United States Attorney William Malony said tonight exceed $100,000.

Buckner, a former resident of the exclusive Park Hill section of Yonkers, N. Y., threw numerous parties in official Washington with Broadway show girls as hostesses as a part of his campaign, Maloney said.

TVA Hid Cash, Asked More, Wolverton Says

Cites Report to Congress Figures at Variance Inquiry Told of Saving

By the Associated Press.

Representative Wolverton (Republican), of New Jersey, a member of the committee investigating the TVA, contended yesterday that the Authority, while seeking additional appropriations, had failed to apprise Congress that it had an unexpended balance of $37,900,000.

Another development before the committee was testimony by Theodore B. Parker, the TVA's chief engineer, that the tripurpose character of the Authority's development had been the means of saving vast sums. He said $94,000,000 had been invested in the three dams now in operation—Wilson, Norris and Wheeler—whereas the total cost of providing separate systems for flood control, navigation and power would have been $160,000,000.

Wolverton questioned representatives of the General Accounting Office about financial reports for the year ended June 30, 1934.

Figures Differ

The General Accounting Office listed TVA assets at $104,244,125, he said, whereas the annual report of the TVA to Congress for the same period listed assets of only $13,714,416—a difference of approximately $90,000,000.

The General Accounting Office auditors said the difference had resulted from TVA's failure to include the Muscle Shoals property, received from the War Department and valued at $51,000,000, and omission of approximately $37,900,000 of funds appropriated by Congress.

"So that any member of Congress looking at the financial statement," Wolverton commented, "would not have been apprised that TVA, while seeking additional appropriations, had an unexpended balance of $37,900,000."

Held "Misleading"

The auditors said TVA was making constant adjustments of its accounts and that its books were never closed.

Turning to S. B. Tulloss, chief of the General Accounting Office investigating staff, Wolverton asked whether he did not consider the TVA statements to Congress "incomplete, unbalanced and misleading."

Tulloss declined to answer directly, but agreed with Wolverton that the reports did not give Congress a "true picture" of TVA finances.

2 Judges Retire From Hearing on Appeal of Hague

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Two retired judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals have withdrawn from the extraordinary five-judge court hearing the appeal of Mayor Frank Hague and other officials in the Jersey City, N. J., "civil liberties" case, Senior Judge J. Warren Davis announced today.

Announcement that a three-judge court—Judges Davis, John Biggs, jr., and Albert B. Maris—would hear the appeal December 19, was made from the bench. Judge Davis then handed reporters copies of a letter signed by both retired Judge Joseph Buffington and Judge J. W. Thompson announcing their withdrawal because of fear that on account of certain statements and contentions which have been made, the senior judge might be embarassed by our sitting, or the merits of the case might be prejudiced one way or another.

C. I. O. and A. C. L. U. attorneys asked the Supreme Court three weeks ago to strip the special five-judge court of authority to hear the appeal.

When the Supreme Court refused to take action, Judge Buffington asserted the high tribunal had "reprimanded" the C. I. O. Morris L. Ernst, A. C. L. U. counsel, countered with the assertion Judge Buffington, by making that statement, had disqualified himself from sitting in the case.

Another Portrait By Robert Feke Found Recently

Discovery of another portrait of Robert Feke is of particular interest because so few definite facts are known regarding this outstanding American artist of the Colonial period, writes Richmond Huntley in American Collector. It is of Simon Pease, born in Newport, R. I., where he also died in 1769, after a busy and profitable life as a merchant and ship owner.

Pease took a keen interest in the affairs of the Rhode Island colony, was quite early in life a member of the Colonial Assembly and later an assistant to the Governor.

Policeman Guilty Of Giving Bomb To His Superior

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP).—George W. Rogers, 41, radio operator in the Morro Castle disaster, recently suspended as a Bayonne policeman, was convicted today by Common Pleas Judge Thomas H. Brown on a charge of assault with intent to kill a superior officer.

Rogers was accused of leaving a home-made bomb, labeled a "fish tank heater," for Lieut. Vincent J. Doyle to "repair" last March 4. The "heater" exploded when Doyle inserted a plug into an electric socket, and he suffered a broken leg and lost three fingers.

Rogers was remanded to jail to await sentence on December 15. He faces a maximum term of 5 to 20 years in the State prison at Trenton. The State contended he sought to get the lieutenant's job.

Leader of Chicago Strike Escapes From 3 Assassins

Gunmen Fire 3 or 4 Bullets Into Car C. I. O. Organizer Leaps to Street Stockyard Parley Set for Monday

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Herbert March, a leader of the C.I.O. strike at the Chicago stock yards, escaped unscathed today from an attack by unidentified gunmen.

Police Capt. John McGinnis said March told him he was driving north on Ashland avenue when when three men drew alongside in another automobile and fired four or five bullets.

March leaped from the car and fell to the pavement, the captain added, while his assailants sped away. One bullet struck the door of his machine. March is an organizer for the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee.

Earlier in the day, District Attorney Campbell received a letter from the striking livestock handlers' union complaining of "attacks on union members by sluggers who are not employes." Campbell said hhe forwarded it to Attorney General Cummings.

Meanwhile, strikers consented to sale of 8,000 animals exhibited at the International Livestock Show on the strike-bound market at the yards.

Regular trade there was completely halted, however.

Peace parleys were scheduled to be resumed next Monday.

Fete Slated Dec. 24
No Child Will Be Missed
Appeal for Names

Arlington County Bureau of The Post, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0500.

"No child in Arlington County will be missed by Santa Claus," is the motto of the Kiwanis Club in its announcement of its third annual Christmas party to be held at Wilson Theater December 24 at 9 a. m., Arthur C. Stickley, chairman of arrangements, said yesterday.

The third annual party will be sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Arlington in co-operation with the management of the Wilson Theater. Last year 470 children were cheered by the event.

The committee made appeals for the name, age and address of any boy or girl who will have no Christmas except as provided by organizations doing this type of work. Names should be submitted to the chairman at Oxford 1900, or Chestnut 1900. Any donations on the part of individuals or organizations should be mailed to John A. Cummins, treasurer of the committee, 1025 North Irving street, Arlington, Va. Boxes for the collection of funds will be distributed among the merchants in the county.

Volunteer firemen from Arlington Company, No. 1, will receive and repair toys at the firehouse located at 1041 South Edgewood street. Firemen in charge of this part of the program are John E. Banforth and L. D. Donaldson.

Stickley further said that this year the committee is making an urgent appeal for dolls, as last year there was a shortage.

A program to amuse the youngsters along with movies in keeping with the season is being arranged and will be announced at an early date.

Members of the committee assisting Chairman Stickley include H. E. Holloway, Carol F. Winchester, Lyman M. Kelley, the Rev. Kenneth M. Rizer, the Rev. Peyton R. Williams, the Rev. P. C. Helmintoller, Frank H. Rowe, Earle R. Kirby and John A. Cummins.

Christmas Seals Drive

Arlington County residents are urged through an appeal from the Arlington County Tuberculosis Association to purchase their Christmas seals in the county to aid in the campaign against tuberculosis in an announcement yesterday by Mrs. Norbert Melnick, chairman of the drive for funds.

The association reports it has received $659.75 from sales to date. This is about the same which was received at this time last year. Mrs. Melnick asks persons returning the self-addressed envelopes inclosed with the appeal to leave their names on the reverse side untouched. Many persons returning the envelopes have scratched out their names, making it impossible to check them with office records and prevent follow-up letters being sent out.

Children to Be Examined

Beginning Monday, the county health department will start the physical examination of school children in the public schools of the county. The examinations will be confined to children between the first and seventh grades. The total enrollment of this group is approximately 5,000.

The examinations will be started by Dr. Paul W. Bowden, assistant health officer, in the Thomas Nelson Page School at Ballston. Dr. Bowden will be assisted by one of the public health nurses in this work. Dr. Verlin Miles also will assist in the examinations.

Dr. Beachley, county health officer, pointed out that one of the principal objects of the examination is the early recognition of physical defects, such as errors of refraction, imperfect hearing, malformations of the body from abnormal positions, enlarged tonsils and adenoids, sources of inflammation and diseases of the heart.

Snow Off Ground, Md. Deer Hunters Told to Go Ahead

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—State Game Warden E. Lee Lecompte gave deer hunters a tentative go-ahead signal tonight, ruling officially that snow from last week's storm had melted.

Lecompte said he checked four or five counties today and found conditions would be suitable for shooting tomorrow. Under Maryland law, hunters may go after deer in Washington, Garrett and Allegany counties only, if snow is on the ground.

The five-day deer season opened today. Because hunting is prohibited on Sunday, this year's season will be cut to three days—unless more snow falls—in 20 counties.

Lecompte said reports of today's shooting in Garrett, Allegany and Washington would not be received until tomorrow.

Kidnaped Girl Returned by Abductors

Kidnap

escaped, said her sister's captors drove a similar truck. The peddlers' dress tallied with the description Lucy gave of the kidnapers.

The men paid visits to two stores within a few miles of Oxon Hill Wednesday morning. That afternoon Mary, 18, and Lucy, 15, were accosted by two men in a black truck and Mary was abducted.

First "Definite Clew"

Police said they regarded the information on the peddlers as the "first definite clew" in the girl's kidnaping.

Two men fro mthe Baltimore field office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were ordered to the scene, where they were joined by Policeman John F. Dent, of Prince Georges County, and began a systematic questioning of all families living nearby to learn if any had seen the truck.

Neighbors said J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau, headed the G-men, a report on which the F. B. I. would not commit itself.

At the request of William B. Brown, the girl's grief-stricken father, 12 Maryland State troopers were assigned to the case by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

The force of six county police continued at work.

Information of the two fruit peddlers was furnished to police by The Post after a Post reporter had unearthed two Prince Georges County merchants who had seen and talked with the men.

Police believed this information set at rest theories the kidnaping may have been for ransom or had been premeditated. They began to look upon the crime as one committed on the spur of the moment by amateurs, a belief which led to increased fears for the girl's safety.

Came Into Store

The merchants who revealed presence of two men exactly answering the description of the kidnapers were Elmer Padgett, of Camp Springs, and Bert Latimer, of Gordons Corner. Both are on the Leonardtown road, Padgett about 9 miles from the Brown home, Latimer about 4.

"Yesterday morning, about 8 o'clock," said Padgett last night, "a black panel delivery truck drove up in front of my place with two men in it. One got out and came in. He looked around then said, 'I don't think you want what I got.'"

Hunt Turns to D. C.

"I asked him why and he told me he was selling oranges and tangerines. He had on a cap and was very roughly dressed and dirty looking."

Latimer said the truck arrived at his store about 12:30 p. m. Wednesday. His description tallied with the statements of Padgett and Lucy Brown.

The truck, he believed, bore District license tags, a circumstance which caused the hunt to turn once more to Washington, where three men in a black truck were arrested early yesterday morning. These suspects were released yesterday after Lucy failed to identify them.

Mary Brown was kidnaped shortly after 4 p. m. Wednesday, when she and Lucy were returning home from Notre Dame Academy, where they were students. Usually, the family said, they were met at the bus stop, 3 miles from the home, by some member of the family. Wednesday they were not met.

Bears and Moose Forecast for Every Barnyard

Tomorrow may find bears, foxes and mink in the barnyard, deer in pastures, quail and pheasant in the poultry house, moose crossed with cattle and waste lands being used profitably as range for wild life, writes Charles Morrow Wilson in Popular Mechanics.

Recreation is a billion-dollar-a-year industry and almost half of all recreation trades follow the roads to hunting and fishing. Wild life, both the oldest and one of the newest of national resources, is beginning to pay dividends in dollars as well as in sport.

Native game birds are becoming the new American poultry. Deer and moose are finding new homes on the private range and fur-bearing animals are becoming the most valuable livestock in the Nation. Such developments are typical of the new age of conservation.

There are two distinct types of game farming. The older deals with breeding and raising fur animals which supply a hundred-million dollar industry. About 23 per cent of all furs bought in the United States are home-raised. The silver fox and the mink are the leading domestic fur animals.

Average cost of raising a market mink is about $2 and the average pelt value is about $18. Cost of producing foxes is approximately one-half that of raising dogs. The value of good breeding animals is five to ten times their pelt values.

Wedding Like a Funeral To Observer in Bengal

Just think of not being able to tell a wedding from a funeral. What a confusing state of affairs! But that is exactly what would happen if one were traveling in Bengal, in the northeastern part of India, along the road to Mount Everest, writes a correspondent.

Almost any day one might meet a procession winding through the hills. In its center some of the marchers would be carrying a bundle suspended from two poles. Such a bundle is wrapped carefully in heavy hangings. Nothing much can be made out about it except that it has the shape of a human body.

Naturally, the onlooker, if he is a stranger in the country, thinks it is a corpse. But he is mistaken. It is a bride. In this part of India a bride is wrapped over and over again until not a toe or a finger is visible. Thus prepared, she is hung between two poles and carried to the new home, where she and her husband are about to set up housekeeping.

United Front Urged to Save Democracy

Education Held Need League Asks Drive Dictators Assailed

Baltimore, Dec. 1, (AP).—High officials of the National Municipal League assailed dictatorships tonight and urged a united educational front to "preserve democracy" in the United States.

C. A. Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin, painted a word picture of "democracies crashing to their doom on every hand."

He urged that in the United States the schools, the press, the radio and the screen, unite to "give the American people an understanding of the problems facing our civilization and democracy."

Dictators, he said, "are making zealots out of citizens and arousing an enthusiasm for the new order which passes our understanding. They are bringing up a generation which is confident of itself and ready to dare anything for the accomplishment of a national goal."

Knocked Down Like Pins

The league's vice president, Marguerite M. Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, referred to "a world where democracies are knocked down like ten pins," and added:

"It has been popular to say that democracy is a neutral thing and makes no call upon the fighting spirit which is felt in communism where a class is fighting for acendency or in fascism where a nation is fighting for ascendency. On the contrary, what could put more fight into a man than threat at the loss of his freedom? Only one who has never experienced freedom or who has never felt the threat of its loss could think of democracy as something not to be fought for."

Their statements in prepared addresses at the banquet followed an assertion by Dean Charles W. Ackerman, of the School of Journalism at Columbia University, in opening the league's forty-fourth meeting, that in the United States:

Shortage Forecast

"The power to tax plus the power to regulate may destroy the freedom of public opinion and make a dictatorship inevitable because it may be necessary for government to take over all agencies of public opinion in order to maintain its power to tax and to regulate."

Carl H. Chatters, executive director of the Municipal Finance Officer's Association, told fiscal experts government and business leaders had adopted a "do-nothing" policy in matters of local government financing. He urged "a fair and rational division of revenues and activities between Federal, State and local governments at the earliest possible date."

At a round table on personnel problems, James K. Polleck, of the University of Michigan, predicted an "imminent serious shortage" of trained technicians to administer civil service systems.

Judiciary Blamed

Paul J. Kern, civil service commissioner of New York City, addressing the personnel session, termed New York judges an "obstacle" to the civil service law, saying "we had very good relations with the courts until we started looking with a fishy eye on the court clerks, and until we privately expressed the opinion that judicial patronage in the form of receiverships and what-not was as great an evil as executive patronage."

Another group discussing citizen responsibilities heard an assertion by Mrs. Dorothy Feder, Cincinnati, that political leaders should be developed among the women of the Nation.

The unicameral—or one house—legislature, was termed successful by Walter L. Pierpont, president of the Association of Omaha Taxpayers, addressing a round table on State government. He said the one-house plan in Nebraska cut legislative costs 27 per cent in its first year.

French Lock Out 700,000, Crush New Wave of Strikes

French

pended according to the "gravity" of the charges against them.

At least 20 highly placed officials, installed under the popular Leftist Coalition, will lose their government posts.

Casino Workers Ousted

At Nice, tramway, bus line and cafe workers were locked out as were all croupiers in the big gambling casinos. Customers in cafes waited on themselves.

Throughout the country long lines of strikers, locked out of plants by government orders, filed applications for unemployment relief.

Correctional courts were clogged with the cases of 1,100 strike demonstrators, rapidly sentenced to prison terms ranging from one week to three months.

Daladier prepared to ask Parliament to approve electoral reforms as a prelude to dissolution of Parliament if, in the future, he should meet strong opposition from his Socialist and Communist foes in the Chamber of Deputies.

Lockout at Plane Factories

Today about 90 per cent of the heavy industries in the Paris industrial suburbs of Argenteuil and Sartouville were locking out returning strikers, including the Caudron and Nieuport airplane factories.

The lockouts extended to the Dewoitine airplane factory at Toulouse and other airplane factories at Bordeaux, Marseille, St. Nazaire and the chemical industries in Paris, Lyons, Marseille and Mont Ferrant. Lockouts also were reported at the Lille textile industries in the north.

Ninety per cent of the airplane and airplane motor factories throughout France were closed, halting production on French aerial rearmament already more than a month behind schedule.

By convening parliament, Daladier smothered the call of Leon Blum, former premier and Socialist leader, for a "rump session" of the deputies Friday morning to condemn what he described as the premier's illegal suppression of the strike.

The collapse of the strike—90 per cent of the nation's workers were estimated to have remained at their jobs under the government's threat of severe penalties—brought dissension in the ranks of the Labor Confederation during the day.

A minority movement was started within the confederation for the overthrow of the paunchy and tuft-bearded Jouhaux as France's "labor czar," a post he has held for 20 years.

Air Minister Guy Lachambre, discussing the shutdown of the aviation plants, gave assurances the government would be able to reach a peak production of 200 planes per month in January as result of the government's strengthened position to push along the reform program, particularly its extension of the 40-hour week, which roused labor to strike.

Roark was shot to death at Kenvir a few days prior to the 1933 primary election in which Middleton won the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Diplomats See Italian Designs On Tunisia

Deputies' Shouts Cited Held Prearranged News Preceded Fact

By James M. Minifie
Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, Dec. 1.—Italy has fired the opening gun for territorial revision at the expense of France, diplomats believed today. They pointed to shouts in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday for Tunisa, Corsica and Savoy, after Foreign Minister Ciano had said the Italian people's "natural aspirations" must be cared for.

Diplomatic circles believe the opportunity is now being created for Hitler to return the many favors which Italy has extended at crucial moments in recent months and which enabled Germany peacefully to absorb Austria, skin Czecho-Slovakia and establish a virtual protectorate over the remains.

New Boundaries Asked

Among neutral observers there is little doubt that yesterday's demonstration was carefully prearranged. In fact, the news that was to happen was sent abroad a few hours before it occurred.

Its significance is emphasized today in an editorial in "El Telegrafo" of Livorno, a ppaer which often closely reflects the views of Ciano, and which is owned by his family.

The writer, Giovanni Ansaldo, discussing the "natural aspirations" of the Italian pepole, states that these comprise complete control of all Italian populations under foreign—and particularly democratic—control.

He adds: "The spirit of Munich must continue to function to repair injustices and compensate old and new wrongs and achieve—why not?—certain rectifications of boundaries which are necessary to give a better systemization to Europe and to the colonial territories. If there are statesmen in Europe instead of politicians this will be undrestood. And if not. . . ."

The same writer makes an allusion to the collaboration between German and Italian general staffs which Ciano revealed had been arranged, indicating that this might be important for the future.

The French embassy has taken the matter calmly. No representations were made by Andre Francois-Poncet, the French ambassador, today. The attitude is apparently being taken that this manifestation was for home consumption.

'Apology' Reported

aris, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Italy was understood to have delivered an "informal apology" tonight for an outbreak in the Italian Chamber of Deputies when shouts were raised for the former Italian territories of Tunisia, Corsica and Nice which France controls.

Foreign Minister Bonnet called in the new Italian Ambassador, Rafaele Guariglia, protested against the demonstration and demanded explanations. The Fascist envoy explained the shouting was "spontaneous." He apologized informally.

The new French Ambassador in Rome, Andre Francois-Poncet who sat in the diplomatic gallery of the Italian chamber and heard the shouts, was asked to make similar representations to Italian Foreign Minister Ciano, who was interrupted in a foreign affairs speech by the cries.

Britain Plans Civilian Draft For War Jobs

Registration First Step Work to Be Allocated To List All Persons

By Frank Kelley.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Dec. 1.—The first step toward eventual conscription of Britain's population for war service was taken today when the government announced in Parliament compilation of a voluntary nation-wide register of men and women would begin immediately.

Plans were outlined in Commons by Sir John Anderson, 56-year-old "Strong Man of Bengal," whom Prime Minister Chamberlain drafted into the cabinet in October to gear Britain's man and woman power to the requirements of modern warfare.

The experience of 1914-'18, wheen skilled workmen were slaughtered in Flanders while untrained men filled their jobs at home and the confusion created by the September crisis over Czecho-Slovakia, have convinced Britain that a war must be fought by the entire population.

Voluntary at First

Registration of trades, locations and aptitudes will be voluntary at first, but in event of war would be compulsory. There would inevitably be immediate conscription for every type of service, and every person would have to do the job allocated to him.

While voluntary registration goes forward, a skeleton plan for the compulsory register will be perfected through use of the staff available for taking the population census, due in 1941. If war should break out, the compulsory register could be completed in three weeks.

By mid-January, Anderson said, handbooks will have been distributed to 20,000,000 households throughout the British Isles. The handbooks will contain details of all the services for which volunteers arre required for the defense of the country—regular fighting gforces, auxiliary and reserve forces, and various services of civil defense, including police, fire and nursing divisions.

Key Jobs to Be Listed

A full list will also be made of key occupations which would become so essential to the Nation's war efforts that persons engaged in them could not be spared for other forms of service.

A Nation-wide service organization will be set up to advise men and women how to choose the best type of service fitted to their qualifications.

The next step, Anderson said, would be to launch a recruiting campaign for special services. This will be co-ordinated to prevent the services from competing wastefully in the same field and to keep civilians in the service for which they are equipped.

A reserve of volunteers will be formed for allocation as needed.

Loyalist Envoy Leaves Chamber Fights New Act Cabinet May Resign

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Dec. 1.—A major revolt was foreshadowed in the Chamber of Deputies today by a break in Belgiums relations with government Spain and mounting discord over domestic affairs.

The diplomatic rupture which followed a decision to send a Belgian commercial agent to insurgent Spain came in the modst of talk of a possible cabinet resignation bcaus of chamber opposition to a government-sponsored compulsory unemployment insurance plan.

Mariano Ruiz Funes, Spanish govrnment ambassador to Brussels, left tonight for Barcelona and Premier Paul Henri Spaak recalled the Belgian charge d'affaires and consul to the Spanish government capital.

Spaak met meanwhile in a two-hour night session with the cabinet council to discuss the opposition to the insurance plan. There were reports he was advocating the resignation of the entire cabinet because of the dispute.

Failing to reach a decision at tonight's session, the cabinet council adjoined to meet again tomorrow afternoon.

Spaak was the objectof a heated attack from the Socialist Party. The Socialists were aroused particularly because of the premier's intention to withdraw from the London non-intervention committee and his decision to send a commercial representative to insurgent Spain.

Almost forgotten in the uproar was the arrival of Oswaldl Pirow, union of South African Defense Finister, for political talks.

Pirow's appearance in Brussels had aroused public fears over reports that Belgium would probably lose if the large European powers made a colonial deal with Reeichsfuehrer Hitler.

Navy Awards Contract for 6th Battleship

To Get $52,794,000 Program in High Gear Johnson Asks Elasticity

National defense preparedness went into high gear yesterday as the Navy announced a $52,794,000 contract for a sixth 35,000-ton battleship, and Assistant Secretary of War Johnson ordered the immediate streamlining and simplification of munitions supply plans.

The award for the new superdreadnaught, the South Dakota, went to the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, N. J.

Speaking before a conference of industrial mobilization experts, Johnson declared that the Army high command does not "want the experience of 1917-1918 repeated."

He warned, however, that preparations for mass production of war materials are only 75 per cent complete, and said, "a job three-quarters done is far from complete. I therefore direct you to bring all of your specifications up to date with all possible dispatch."

Plans for Elasticity

In the drawing of plans, he continued, the purpose to be accomplished with a particular weapon must be kept constantly in mind. Apparently referring to Germany, he stated, "in a certain foreign country designers ahere closely to that principle and strip all nonessentials from their important items of war equipment."

Pleading for elasticity in war preparations, Johnson asserted that "despite the best laid plans, mobilization day is more than likely to be something other than what we expected. We must, therefore, keep a certain degree of flexibility in our plans. In computing our requirements for supply, we must be prepared to meet the needs of changing strategict situations, not only at the outset of a campaign, but throughout its rapidly changing scenes."

Referring to expected appropriation increases for weapons, planes and supplies, he said, "There is a big job ahead of us."

The Navy contract was for the last of the four battleships for which Congress provided initial funds this year. It was delayed nearly two weeks after the others had bene awarded during negotiations which resulted in a reduction of more than $2,000,0000 in the firm's original bid.

In addition to the four newest battleships, the Navy already has two under construction at the New York and Philadelphia navy yards.

Ecuador President Quits, but Cabinet Is Kept on Job

Quito, Ecuador, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Provisional President Manuel Maria Borrero tonight tendered his resignation to the National Assembly, which voted immediately to accept it.

Borrero's cabinet resigned, but the Assembly refused to permit the ministers to quit, to prevent governmental chaos.

Borrero was named provisional president by the Assembly last August 10 to succeed Gen. Alberto Enriquez. Three weeks ago he threatened to resign but reconsidered his decision after the Assembly voted confidence in him.

25 Children Die, Many Hurt as Train Crushes Bus

Engine Carries Portion of Bus Half Mile

1 "The Flying Ute," one of the West's fastest freight trains, was speeding through a Utah snowstorm behind schedule when it struck a school bus at the Midvale crossing, bringing death to more than a score of children and injuring many more. A portion of the large bus is shown on the front of the train. The train ran its full length—a half mile—before it could stop.

Location of Tragedy

Impact of Collision Breaks Bus in Two

Trust Inquiry Hears Lubin at First Session

Monopoly

the nine years of depression which he said have cost $119,000,000,000 in wages and salaries, and a $142,000,000,000 loss in national income. He called it a "durable goods depression." Pointer in hand, he looked for all the world like a college economics professor addressing his class, speaking rapidly he reeled off figures in bewildering progression.

No reference to "monopoly" or "wealth concentrations," reputed targets of the inquiry, figured in his presentation. Only once or twice did questions from committeemen point such implications, and these were passed over.

O'Mahoney Pledges Fairness

The large Senate caucus room was filled to capacity as the long-heralded hearings opened with a statement by Senator O'Mahoney assuring the public that "no personal, partisan, or factional program is controlling here." O'Mahoney said the committee's broad powers would be employed only " to develop economic facts which in the very nature of things must be widely comprehended before any constructive recommendations can be outlined."

Today Dr. Willard L. Thorp, special adviser of the committee on leave of absence from his post as Dun & Bradstreet economist, will round up the "economic preview" from the industrial viewpoint and tomorrow Leon Henderson, executive secretary of the committee, will conclude the initial phase of the hearing.

Dr. Lubin repeatedly drove home the often-stated point that a lag in durable goods, such as iron, steel, automobiles, refrigerators and other heavy goods, chiefly marked the depression, while nondurable consumer goods maintained a fair degree of constancy. The problem is, he said, to "keep the durable goods industries moving." He contended only rising living standards in the lower-income groups can do that.

Uses 1929 as Base

Using 1929 as a base year, Lubin devoted much of his testimony to the consequences and causes of the breakdown that followed; how industrial output trebled and the per capita increase doubled in the 30 years leading up to 1929; how by 1932 total production had fallen back to the 1914 level and the population growth had set the per capita production back to 1901.

Total loss of working time resulting from unemployment in the last nine years, he said, would equal 14 months employment for everyone who had a job in the nonagricultural industries in 1929. Had 1929 income continued unchanged, he said, $1,000 more in goods and services for each man, woman and child in the United States would have been available. He estimated per capita income for the current year at $472, compared with 3540 in 1937, 3.20 in 1932 and an average of $806 for the decade ending in 1929. Despite the drop below the level of the 'twenties, he said, per capita income in this country still averages higher than in England, and is very much greater than in Germany, Sweden and France.

Lubin estimated 6,900,000 households and 22,250,000 persons now receiving some form of assistance from Federal, State or local governments, not including social security assistance or private relief. The total public cost for 1938 he estimated at $5,638,000,000. Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, remarked that the relief cost is higher now than when the load was heavier, and was told that individual payments are larger.

Discussing possible consumer outlets for industry under rising living standards in the lower income half, Lubin suggested a housing boom might develop as earnings increased and pay rolls stabilized. Taking a single commodity—oranges—as an example of how consumption increases with rises in income. While a $1,200 family spends an average of 75 cents a year on oranges, he said, the outlay more than triples to $2.89 in a $1,500 family.

Summary's Effects

Summarizing what he said a $2.25 daily increase in earnings of 5,200,000 family now having an income of $1,200 or less would mean to specify industry groups, he estimated resulting increases in business as follows:

Food	$800,000,000
Clothing	416,000,000
Housing	613,000,000
Fuel, light and refrigeration	213,000,000
House furnishings and equipment	224,000,000
Transportation, including automobiles	385,000,000
Personal care	73,000,000
Recreation	234,000,000
Medical care	208,000,000

Lubin told reporters the estimates were based on what families earning $1,700 do with their income.

"I want to give an idea of what industry might expect to gain from such an increase in earnings," he said, contending the industrial machine, timed at a higher rate, must "mesh its gears so as to pull goods into these homes."

Chairman O'Mahoney said that industry had shown in 1929 that alone it cannot assure security and employment, and Government has demonstrated since that alone "it also is unable to do the job."

"The conclusion I have drawn from this testimony," Omahoney told reporters, "is the absolute necessity of business and Government co-operating to solve the economic problem."

Italy's Appetite Grows

With the French Ambassador looking on from the gallery, the Italian Chamber of Deputies on Wednesday clamored vociferously for the annexation of Tunisia, Corsica, Nice and Savoy.

This seems a none-too-subtle intimation to France that Mussolini expects Munich to have a sequel—with Italy, this time, in the role of territorial beneficiary and France in the unhappy position forced upon Czecho-Slovakia by Europe's quadrumvirate of peacemakers.

It is not to be assumed that the Fascist government expects to get Tunisia, Corsica, Nice and Savoy, at least not right away nor all at once. Italy has cast longing eyes at all of these areas, particularly Tunisia, for a long time. But there is no reason to expect that France will capitulate merely in response to a regimented demonstration of Mussolini's claque of deputies or at a crook of his little finger.

Three of these areas, Nice, Savoy and Corsica, have been integral parts of France for a long time, while Tunisia has been French for close to 60 years. And the French government recently made it clear that it is strongly opposed to the cession of any colonial possessions under French sovereignty.

However, the action of the Italian chamber can be useful to the Duce for bargaining purposes. If he cannot get Tunisia directly he might at least get France to grant special rights to the Italians in that French colony. Actually they outnumber Frenchmen there. And even if such a concession proves out of the question at the moment he might force the Paris government to change its stand on Spain.

In pursuit of the joint policy of appeasement, Great Britain and France recently recognized Italy's sovereignty over Ethiopia. That might have satisfied Mussolini once. It does not satisfy him any longer. The very readiness of the democratic powers to make concessions to the dictators has whetted his appetite. And he has learned from Hitler that a belligerent attitude pays dividends.

The Ever-Mounting Debt

Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that mid-December financing will increase the Federal debt by $700,000,000 is a reminder that the Administration's pump-priming program, added to ordinary expenditures, is expected to produce a deficit of approximately $4,000,000,000 for the current fiscal year. That does not imply that the outstanding indebtedness will expand by an equal amount, because the Treasury has abnormally large cash balances which can be drawn upon, while various Government trust funds provide a resting place for special issues.

With private flotations of new capital issues still negligible, banks and institutional investors will unquestionably absorb any net additions to the Government's indebtedness resulting from deficit financing. There is no anxiety on that score. Nor is there any reason to be unduly worried about the actual size of the Federal debt. It still constitutes a relatively moderate charge upon our national income.

To be sure, the annual interest charge on our Federal debt amounted to nearly $950,000,000 for the last fiscal year, a sum much larger than our total ordinary expenditures prior to 1917. But the real cause of concern springs not from this figure so much as from the persistence of deficit financing and the failure to accommodate it to fluctuations in business activity.

In 1930 the Federal debt amounted to approximately $16,000,000,000. By the end of next June it will probably exceed $40,000,000,000. The question which thoughtful men ask is how long the Government proposes to incur deficits to prime a business pump that refuses to function normally when such pressure is relaxed. In view of the prospective expansion in defense outlays this question becomes especially significant. While marked business improvement has been experienced in certain respects, there is no possibility of achieving a balanced budget through increased taxation alone.

In spite of the billions that have been expended to re-establish prosperity, we know that many problems of the depression period remain unsolved. Agricultural prices are disappointingly low; export outlets have been permanently lost for some of our basic agricultural commodities. Unemployment remains abnormally high, while private capital is reluctant to embark upon new enterprises that would provide more jobs.

Under these circumstances, it is plainly imperative to follow a more cautious policy. That necessity is emphasized by the unfortunate effects of our methods of deficit financing, which have resulted in a huge accumulation of Government securities in banks and credit institutions. The ease with which the Treasury places its new obligations with the banks at abnormally low rates of interest lays the foundation for potential credit inflation on a vast scale.

So far lack of incentive has averted the danger of such inflation. But it remains an ever-present possibility.

To Safeguard Defense

Every major piece of legislation proposed to the Congress which assembles in January will doubtless undergo close scrutiny. Prominent members of both the Senate and House of Representatives are returning to Washington with an increased sense of legislative responsibility. In presenting its national defense program, as well as other vital measures, the Roosevelt Administration must be prepared to deal with the most independent Congress it has yet confronted.

It is not to be supposed that Congress will be antagonistic toward any armament program that can be shown to be advisable for national defense. On the contrary, Congressional groups would certainly move to strengthen the armed forces if the President had any disposition to be silent on this point. The whole country recognizes the need for a more efficient defense system to safeguard American interests against aggression running riot.

Congress may have a good deal to say, however, as to the direction the armament program will take. So vital an issue as national defense can be reasonably considered only in relationship to other pressing problems.

The first question which Congress may be expected to ask will concern potential threats to our national security and the effectiveness of proposed measures in combating those threats. It will want assurance, too, that the American democracy is on the way to acquiring sufficient strength to restore its prestige in the council of nations.

Important as these considerations are, the legislative examination of the defense program should not end there. Rearmament plans always raise domestic as well as international issues. The need for a stronger air fleet, a larger navy and a more efficient nucleus army comes at a time when the Government is spending recklessly for numerous other purposes. Congress will face the problem of adjusting the defense program to a long-continued domestic policy of deficit financing, as well as to foreign disturbances.

Considering the magnitude of the unemployment and relief problems, this will not be an easy task. For that very reason it should be faced realistically throughout the process of budget-making. National defense—to say nothing of the national welfare—requires efficient governmental financing as well as efficient armaments.

As long as unemployment remains severe there will be a temptation to sponsor another spending program under the guise of national preparedness. Unless the country is to abandon all hope of a balanced Federal budget, Congress will have to be on guard against any such move. The necessity of meeting defense requirements serves to emphasize the desirability of eliminating inefficient pump-priming ventures.

Congress must be on the alert, too, for "rider" legislation that may be attached to the defense program. Efforts to extend arbitrary business and industrial controls in the name of national defense must be anticipated. It would be the height of irony if a rearmament program designed to protect us against totalitarian aggression were permitted to encourage dictatorial trends within the country.

The problem of rearmament is as complicated as it is urgent. It calls for sympathetic understanding on the part of Congress along with critical analysis of each proposal to prevent waste and distortion of the primary objective. That sort of scrutiny by Congress should strengthen rather than weaken American international policy.

Our Divided Police

The abduction of Mary Brown gives new significance to Commissioner Hazen's proposed conference with Maryland and Virginia police authorities. While that crime was committed in Maryland near Oxon Hill, it is of immediate concern to Washington. Outrages of this sort call for the closest co-operation between the officers of Washington and adjacent communities.

Commissioner Hazen seems to have been chiefly interested in the pursuit of numbers racketeers across the District line when he suggested a good-neighbor conference. But his original plan could be readily extended to include co-operative handling of major crimes in the vicinity of the District line. No doubt Maryland and Virginia authorities are as eager as those of Washington to increase the effectiveness of law enforcement in this area.

There is a good opportunity for expert consideration of this subject in the survey of the Montgomery County government just begun by the Brookings Institution. Suggestions from this impartial research agency would be a welcome supplement to the proposed good-neighbor conference.

In the meantime there is increased hope that the District will move to consolidate its own separate police forces. Commissioner Hazen is quoted as saying that, with an adequate number of police and a unified department, Washington would have no outbreak of violent crimes such as those recently perpetrated. His reference to centralization of local police forces is especially significant. By all means the division of the local police into two forces, one responsible to the District Commissioners and the other to the Interior Department, should be ended as a prelude to interstate co-ordination.

That reform has been recommended by virtually every student of the local government, including the Prettyman reorganization committee. When serious crimes threaten the peace of the community it is not enough that the two forces work in harmony. They should be actively directed by one head. Recent events will strengthen the hands of local officials if they actively seek this change along with an increased number of policemen.

Contrasting Methods

After months of preliminary preparation hearings begin this week before the Temporary National Economic Committee, consisting of six members of Congress and six representatives of the Administration. Unlike the ordinary run of official investigating bodies, the committee apparently does not harbor any preconceived ideas of the nature and extent of the economic evils which call for remedial action.

The cumbrous and colorless official designation of the committee tends to emphasize the objective attitude of its chairman, Senator O'Mahoney, who has frequently indicated that his chief aim is to throw light on the nature, structure and problems of our complicated economic system. He has no desire to conduct a probe designed solely to unearth monopolistic abuses and pillory offenders. What he seeks is information to guide the committee in formulating a comprehensive regulatory plan to improve our industrial system without disturbing the fundamental economic and political institutions upon which it is based.

As the open hearings proceed it will doubtless be difficult for some members of the T. N. E. C. to maintain the attitude of detachment which is so essential to the forming of dispassionate judgments. An excellent beginning has been made, however, by calling as first witness Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, whose expert knowledge and long administrative experience eminently qualify him to give sound advice in his particular field.

Mr. Lubin's startling figures indicating the immense losses in wages and salaries resulting from nine years of subnormal business conditions is calculated to impress the committee with the gravity and pressing nature of the problems with which they have to deal.

The methods so far followed by the O'Mahoney committee afford a striking and refreshing contrast to those of the Dies committee on un-American activities. Whereas the former has co-operated with a large number of Government agencies to obtain pertinent data, the latter has antagonized Government officials and private experts by its eagerness to publicize the sensational disclosures of witnesses whose reliability is open to question.

From present indications the T. N. E. C. will shortly be in possession of a vast amount of written and verbal testimony throwing new light on obscure aspects of the Nation's business practices. Accumulation of testimony, however carefully selected, is not, however, the hardest part of the work to be done. The final and most difficult task is to correlate and interpret the assembled data and decide what legislative action is required to preserve what is good while suppressing what is evil. The broad scope of the O'Mahoney inquiry will make this task a stupendous undertaking.

An Arctic Democracy

Iceland, that long-lived democracy of the Arctic, is now celebrating the twentieth anniversary of dominion status. Under the Danish monarchy since the thirteenth century, it has enjoyed complete self-government, under a common king with Denmark, only since December 1, 1918. In 1930, Iceland celebrated a thousand years of republican institutions, a millennium of democracy and parliamentary government.

That the country survives to this day as both democratic and independent is a tribute to its capacity for self-government but even more a tribute to the ability of its people to maintain their economic life in tolerable balance. Their standard of living is low, but, such as it is, each man earns his own and does not look to the government for his subsistence.

"We have learned during the past two years that the budget should not be brought into balance too abruptly," declares a New Dealer. "You know, I gotta have a little drink to taper off on," said the drunk, as he gulped down another pint.

The Montgomery Survey

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wish to congratulate you on the splendid editorial appearing in your issue of November 30 in regard to the action taken by the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners in securing the services of the Brookings Institution for a survey of all phases of the county government.

I introduced the original resolution of the Montgomery County Civic Federation requesting a study to be made on this question and greatly appreciate the valuable assistance your staff gave the federation in calling the attention of the public to the need of a survey of this character.

I took no part in urging the commissioners to authorize this study prior to the recent election but feel that any overzealousness our committee displayed in their anxiety to secure favorable action by the board should be overlooked, as everyone appears to be in accord with the movement to improve our county government.

The Chest And GHA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Within the past two weeks your paper has printed news stories, editorials and comments from readers expressing facts and opinions involved in the controversy between Group Health Association and the hospitals of the District of Columbia. Numerous contributors to the Community Chest have signed a letter bearing on the Chest's position in this matter and have sent it to the director of the Community Chest as their agent for transmission to the hospitals discriminating against Group Health doctors.

Those who have signed the letter have contributed to the Chest because they feel it provides, under existing conditions, the best vehicle for the relief of human suffering. They do not, however, want support of the Chest to be construed as indorsement for the present attitude of the hospitals. Furthermore, they feel that even though the Chest maintains a "neutral" position in this matter, it should publicize these protests lest silence by the Chest be construed as constituting support for the position taken by the individuals responsible for the policy of the hospitals.

Thomas Circle Underpass

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The press informs us that the proposed underpass at Thomas Circle will destroy 100 trees on Massachusetts avenue.

This should not be allowed. Why an underpass in Washington? We are yet a village compared to New York. Why an underpass and the enlarging of Thomas Circle? Why not make the circle smaller, do away with the underpass idea and save the trees—all of them?

Thomas Circle has no fountains, no benches, no cross paths, only a monument and four trees (I pass it every morning). The circle could be made only large enough to save the monument, four trees and a narrow finish of lawn and curbstone. With this there would be plenty of room. The trees, God's work, would be saved, and much money that the underpass would cost.

We do not need an underpass if this condition were changed on the surface.

If the protests of the people against the destruction of these 100 trees isn't sufficient, an executive order should save them. It takes 75 or 100 years for small trees to become large shade trees.

Concerning 'Browder's Brainstorm'

In The Same Stall

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial of November 29, "Browder's Brainstorm," was so timely and so chock full of common sense that I want to thank you. As you say, it would be about as rational for America to make an alliance with Berlin as with Moscow, since both glorify dictatorship at the expense of individual liberty.

I have often heard Americans debating the relative merits of Communism and Nazi-Fascism—debating them, that is, with the thought of their application to our own country. Apparently the idea has been that some day we would have to choose between the two. Heaven forbid! Both Communism and Nazi-Fascism are brutal despotisms, both are government under perpetual martial law, and both have a smell that ought to be unbearable in the nostrils of an American.

There is only one slight difference that I would like to note: The Nazi-Fascists in the country, when they are criticized, either strike back or stay quiet. The Communists, however, merely whine, and their fellow-travelers set up the old cry of "Red-baiting." Invariably that is their defense, and a good defense it has been, too. How many times have you heard a man who is about to take a crack at Communism preface his remarks with the assurance that he is not a "Red-baiter?" Why is this?

It is because he has heard that a Red-baiter is synonymous with reactionary, or worse. He is afraid people won't understand that he is a "liberal." Well, I might ask how anybody could call Russia liberal, but you have already given the answer. And in doing it, you have adopted a beautiful technique. You have made the Nazis and the Communists stand in the same stall and rub noses, and they don't like it. When you are baiting the whole totalitarian front, however, there isn't much that the long-haired boys can say about it.

Russia's Achievements

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In your editorial of today (November 29, 1938), entitled "Browder's Brainstorm," you seem very much alarmed about a possibility of a Moscow-American axis.

Russia maintains a nonaggression policy and adheres to peace at any cost. By speaking of Russia and Hitler's Germany in the same breath, you fail to see the tremendous achievements of the Soviet Union in the economic and in the cultural field, as compared with the barbaric enslavement of Germany. The Soviet Union wants peace. She solved her minority problem without any racial discrimination. She hates Fascism.

Is that not enough of a record to become an ally? One must not subscribe to Communism in all its details, yet can at the same time agree on some form of alliance that will not infringe on our form of government. One more look at the record of the Soviet Union and learn that Russia has never failed to carry out any of its obligations made in the 20 years of its existence, which cannot be truly said about a good many other nations.

A Wistful Grunt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial grunt over Earl Browder's recent proposal for a Washington-Moscow pact to counteract the growing influence of fascism in the world is a typical example of newspaper pooh-poohing. Personally, I am a stranger to The Post's "viewpoint of preserving American ideals." But certainly from the viewpoint of preserving American economic royalism, it would be more rational to make an alliance with Berlin than with Moscow.

Browder argued from the roots of sheer national interests, the threatened eclipse of our trade in the Far East, the invasion of our markets in South America, the destruction of American labor standards by enslaved populations and, finally, the encirclement of the country by the executioners of democracy. Where in all or any of these possible developments is there to be found the hand of Soviet diplomacy or even "philosophy," which you have maintained to be "identical" with that of Fascism?

Your bumper crop of "disasters" for those countries having close relations with the Soviets is a compendium of phoney Tory cliches. It was primarily the mock-heroic desertion of the Chamberlain and Daladier governments that proved the undoing of the Czechs. At no time was the Soviet Union committed to the defense of the fallen republic without the participation of France. Material support for the loyalist government in Spain was withheld in a genuine concern to effect non-intervention, but since that farcical attempt, Russian support has helped rally the people of Spain into an epic defense of their country.

Wistfully you proclaim fascism to be the "not unreasonable excuse" for the "natural and spontaneous revolt against the revolutionary implications of communism." This affords something startlingly new in cause and effect. Of course, no revolutionary ever came into being because of the growing oppressiveness of a national government as dictated by a corrupt, desperate ruling class. That would be like putting the horse before the proverbial cart, where it belongs; which of course is only some more of what you aptly see fit to call "pernicious nonsense."

Keep It In Russia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial "Browder's Brainstorm" is very timely indeed, and also very illuminating to those that talk about the two renowned "isms" without knowing what they actually are.

As you stated in the editorial, Russia's friendship has brought disaster to its friends, proving it with actual facts that speak very clearly.

Italy and Germany, also Spain, have felt the searing breath of the Red Bear, burning with hatred of social classes, brother against brother, destroying, pillaging everyone, for themselves (the Reds). The writer has witnessed the work of Bolshevism and for my part they can keep it in Russia.

Do we have to see the work of communism here at home in order that we may convince ourselves of the reason that fascism fights communism? All the friends of Spanish and Russian democracies and leagues against fascism have raised the moral standing of the United States to zero.

Before these organizations were born, the United States stood as the leader in the concert of nations; America was revered; an American was respected all over the world. Now, thanks to the above "orders" with their picketing, protesting, and interfering in other countries' affairs, they have succeeded in making America a mockery.

The Post Impressionist

The Bug Man

"VIRGINIA DIGS IN TO HALT MARCH OF BEETLES TO DEEP SOUTH," said the headline. The paper was several weeks old, but it was news to me. I had been out of town for some time.

"Those damn Yankees never are going to let us alone," my husband grumbled.

"It's all about the bug man," I said. "I didn't know he was famous. Next time we pass we're going to stop and talk to him."

"Bah—no grammar, no sense," he replied. He was still cross as a result of having been got out of bed to answer the door early that morning.

All the same, we stopped the next time back from Richmond. The bug man stood in the middle of the road. On the side of the road was a sign "Japanese Beetle Inspection."

"Do you stay open all night?" I asked. It was a catch question, because we had been by dozens of times between midnight and dawn and I couldn't remember being stopped but twice. It seemed pretty silly to halt all automobiles in the daytime and let pests from the badly infested Maryland area stream across at night.

The bug man walked over to the edge of the road, a grin spreading on his face. After a second he asked:

"Why?"

"I want to write something."

"Will it count against me?"

"No."

He laughed and then explained that usually they quit at 10 o'clock. But that during part of July and August, when the beetles were out of the ground, there were three eight-hour shifts. In other months they occasionally ran an experimental shift to see what passed in a night. Experience showed that on that road there was not sufficient bug traffic to warrant the extra expense.

"However," he said, "the station on Route 1 is open day and night, all year around. And so far this year we have taken 7,300 beetles and 500 larvae in the three stations around Fredericksburg."

Some women, it seems, got a great deal of amusement out of his inspection. While we stood on the side of the road watching, one woman sat on the edge of her seat and rocked back and forth with laughter, a young girl doubled up and put her head in her lap, still others merely laughed good-naturedly. When I made some remark about it the young officer replied:

"Yes, and you laugh right with them until they're gone and then you cuss them. You stand here all by yourself and let 'em have it."

My husband asked if he had much trouble with people trying to conceal plants.

"Well, occasionally"—he looked at me—"and women are the worst ones about telling lies. They stop and when you hand them the usual spiel they shake their head just a little or say 'unh-ah' real low, like that would keep it from being a bad lie. They don't like to come out and say 'no' and tell a real lie. They're equivocal, that's what they are.

"The people who carry most of the plants are those that have a house down in Florida and another in New York, rich folks. They always like to be taking something from one place to another."

"What happens," I asked, "if you suspect someone is hiding plants in the trunk of the car?"

"We ask them to let us look. They don't have to, you know. We haven't got warrants or anything like that, but usually they let us snoop around. If they know their constitutional law, they can tell me it's none of my damn business. I can't do a thing but let them go on.

"In the old days we used to go through suitcases, boxes, trunks—every old thing. But not now. What's more, we get about the same amount of beetles now as we did then—there's not much difference."

He was back in the middle of the road again carrying on with his routine. From one car he took a piece of potted ivy. The dirt was put in a fumigator, the roots and the pot washed and returned to their owner. A record was made of the girl's name and address, also of where the plant came from.

Next time there was a lull in traffic he remarked, Today is Sunday and everyone is happy and nice, but tomorrow, Monday, is the worst day of all. Mainly businessmen traveling. They're cross and get mad at you and nobody's in a good humor."

After a pause he said, "On Saturday night we get mostly drunks."

This reminded us of the car full of boys who, after having left a party, came upon a well-lighted stretch of road and a man in uniform. They threw the whisky out.

What would you have done?

Our Back Yard

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Recently, yours and all the papers have expressed indignation over the terrorism of the German people toward Jews; many leading citizens have expressed sympathy and extended a helping hand; nations have become alarmed and joined in a united front to thwart persecution.

While I do not justify nor approve in the least of cowardly persecution, my eyes will not fail me when I look upon our own back yard. Under the Constitution and laws of the United States, the American people enjoy many inherent rights. All classes and creeds come thereunder, but, Mr. Editor, would you or some correspondent tell me the difference between illegal murder in Germany and illegal lynching in America? What is the difference between the closed doors of educational institutions of the Southland to the Negroes and the same closed doors to the Jews of Germany?

And what about the theaters, the restaurants, the public conveyances, the churches and hundreds of other restrictions embarrassingly imposed upon our American neighbors and citizens, the Negroes? Who, from a practical point of view enjoys the greatest opportunity in this democracy, the American-bred, agitating foreigner (the German), or the loyal patriotic American Negro?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Public Graft

THIS ONE is going to look like a man trying to pitch ball with a handful of feathers, because the subject is very loose and scattery. It refers to the sentence of 139 years imposed on a nasty little maniac named Robert Irwin, who killed three persons, and the question whether he got a bargain in escaping the electric chair.

PEGLER

Some say this and some say that, but I will attempt to say that people in this country have centered their attention and resentment on the dramatic crime of murder to the neglect and condonation of another type of crime which is just as bad as murder in its effect on the safety of the community. I am inching up to the subject of graft and corruption in public office and the suppression of the liberties of the people by local dictators.

It isn't only the cash cost to the taxpayers that makes graft a grave crime, because, whether a man steals from individuals or from masses of individuals, that is only larceny, after all.

BUT WHEN his thieving, whether by actual tapping of the till, which is a crude method practiced only by poor, dumb dopes, or by subtler methods, deprives the people of improvements and services and brings their government into popular contempt, he is a dangerous enemy of the people's liberties and the safety of the country. I suppose that is rather high sounding, but if so that is just too bad, and just goes to show how tolerant we are of this kind of crime. I shall tell you why I think it is so dangerous.

It sabotages the operations of democracy and brings people to the point of toying with the idea that maybe they would be better off under a dictatorship, which is another way of saying that it discredits the American system of government. They get into the habit of thinking that every second, third or fourth dollar of public money is earmarked for the grafters by a tradition having almost the force and dignity of law, and in time they may develop a what-the-hell attitude and a conviction that democracy is just a wall motto and not a system.

IT WOULD BE easy to mention names of men who should have gotten death—or, anyway, life—for public thievery in New York, Chicago, Jersey City, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, but I have to watch out for libel, because most of them have never even been indicted, much less convicted, but any informed resident of those communities will find the names springing up to his tongue. If a few such criminals had gotten death—or, anyway, life—a long time back the more recent generation of thieves would never have entered politics at all, because it would have been an honest profession and thus unsuited to their talents and unattractive to their nature.

Suppose, for example, that in Chicago some thieving county officials whose perfidy not only increased the people's tax burden, but hampered the efficiency of their government, had been hanged in the old county jail, say, 30 years ago. Or suppose he had just gotten life, but hadn't been paroled and had been compelled to stay in Joliet until he died.

AND LET ME assume also that similar lessons had been given in various other communities early in the game as a warning to public servants that any crime against the public trust tending to sabotage the democratic system would be regarded as an attack on the liberties of the citizens.

I think that had this been done we could today have a much higher standard of honesty in politics in office and that the people, in their hearts, would have a much stronger love for and appreciation of their liberties. But, as it is, I am afraid the people regard such crimes as mere mischief inherent in democracy and would be shocked at the very suggestion that a criminal politician, guilty of jeopardizing their liberties by crippling their government, is comparable in evil to a murderous nut who killed three persons.

THE CITIZENS of this country seem to believe that the good old democratic system can support forever any burden of graft, willful impairment and discredit that can be loaded upon it. In this sense they connive at the attack on the democratic system and their own liberties, which vanish when the system at last collapses into one or the other of the dirty European isms.

Homer Cummings and Edgar Hoover, with the help of the press, have changed the attitude of the whole country toward the hoodlums who for a long time were glamorized in the public imagination. They are now regarded as rodent enemies of society, but the thieving, grafting, sabotaging politician and officeholder is still honored as a sort of Robin Hood.

"Object All Sublime"

"Christmas and Peace in the Orient" is the title of an original cantata just published here (Tokyo) for distribution among Japanese residing abroad and among Christians everywhere. The hymn is in ten parts and takes 40 minutes to present.

With the second war-time Christmas approaching in Japan, says the Miyako, the music is designed to express the righteousness of Japan's cause in China before the world. The music was composed by Mr. Shuichi Tsugawa, of Azabu Ward, and the words by Mr. Kiyoshi Saito, of Suginami Ward, both avid students of church music. Inspired by the thought of Japanese soldiers bleeding on the battlefields of China for the sake of justice, the two are said to have aspired to inform the world through Christianity of Japan's right and might.

The Controversy Over Group Health

(The following is excerpted from Mr. Hard's article, entitled "Medicine and Monopoly," in the December number of the Survey Graphic, wherein the history of the controversy is reviewed.)

THE HOSPITALS of Washington—with one exception which involves only child birth cases—will not extend their facilities to Group Health Association physicians for care of their patients. This policy of theirs becomes especially grievous to Group Health Association when the patients need operations. The patients may go to the hospitals; but the operations—except in cases of extreme acute emergency—must be performed by surgeons in good standing with the medical profession. The result is that Group Health Association, besides paying salaries to its own surgeons, has to pay fees for operations to professionally indorsed surgeons. The result is also that a large number of operations needed—but not urgently and instantly needed—by Group Health Association members go unperformed.

The opportunity thus opened for Group Health Association propaganda is obvious, and it is eagerly embraced. I quote from a mimeographed circular issued by the Social Security Board Members of Group Health Association:

"One hundred and sixty patients of Group Health Association—men, women and children—are waiting for operations, not of an emergency nature, that can be performed only in a hospital. This cannot be realized in any of the present Washington hospitals, because the patients want Group Health doctors to perform the operations. And Group Health doctors are barred from the hospitals."

NOW THE POLICIES of the Washington hospitals in medical matters are largely determined by their medical staffs; and the members of their medical staffs are largely dominated by the medical guild ideal of the American Medical Association and the District of Columbia Medical Society. The exclusion of the Group Health Association doctors from the Washington hospitals was attributable accordingly to the "medical monopoly," so-called. This "medical monopoly," as seen by Group Health Association members, had now committed four "crimes." It had tried to impede Group Health Association in getting a medical staff; it had refused to allow its members to hold joint consultations with G. H. A. staff physicians; it had expelled Dr. Scandiffio, and it had induced the Washington hospitals to exclude G. H. A. physicians from the use of their facilities.

I AM FORCED to think that Group Health Association is already incipiently victorious. The medical society, right along with Group Health Association, is now in the deep forest of group action and of equalizing action; and the medical society can only hope that with its vastly larger medical resources it can find and blaze a better path toward the future.

Current expectation is that the medical society will begin to operate its plan in the early part of next year. We shall then have two group health insurance plans simultaneously seeking customers in Washington. It will be for Thurman Arnold to see to it that the competition between them is "free and fair."

It cannot be wholly "free and fair" till the doctors of Group Health Association get hospital operating facilities. They may get them, as I have intimated, through the establishment of a hospital of their own; or they may perhaps get them, it now appears, through a change of policy by the existing hospitals. The popular pressure upon those hospitals toward a change of policy is becoming all the time heavier. Government employes are numerously circulating a chain letter suggesting that Community Chest pledge cards be filled out as follows: "My pledge to the Community Chest will be due and payable only when the local hospitals cease discriminating against the physicians and members of Group Health Association."

I venture to predict that hospital facilities for Group Health Association will somehow be secured. I venture to predict that all the professional medical ostracisms of Group Health Association will somehow, some day—either because of Thurman Arnold or because of mere fatigue on the part of the medical society—get relaxed and removed. And I venture to believe that the medical society will then get its best chance to try to make really effective criticisms of Group Health Association, criticisms consisting of trying to render a similar service in a more serviceable manner.

In other words, Mr. Arnold rejects the guild principle and promotes the "open market" principle, as indeed he must under the anti-trust laws which he is sworn to enforce.

I THINK THAT I can assure Mr. Arnold that he will presently see a quite magnificent display of "open market" competition in medical care in the District of Columbia.

Group Health Association is preparing for it by strengthening its financial and professional arrangements. Its president, William C. Kirkpatrick, supervisor of the tax section of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, is a vigorous administrator. The dues charged by Group Health Association have been increased. They used to amount to $3.30 a month for husband, wife and children under 18. They now amount—for that same family group to $5. Applicants must now take physical examinations. They must also pay an application fee of $5. The services rendered to members and their dependents are virtually but not totally "complete." They do not include brain surgery or spinal-cord surgery or hospitalized tubercular or narcotic cases. A business manager has been employed to attend to all nonmedical details of administrative routine. A $10 "membership fee" has been imposed upon all members, old and new, for the purpose (if found necessary) of giving Group Health Association a hospital of its own. In short, every effort seems to be in course of being made to put Group Health Association in a sound competitive position.

And why not? It soon will have direct competition in the group-health field from the District of Columbia Medical Society itself. This prospect is not far from constituting a local medical revolution. For importance it completely eclipses the outcome of Mr. Arnold's grand-jury proceedings, whatever that outcome may be.

TWO YEARS AGO, even before the Group Health Association plan was hatched, the medical society was incubating a plan of its own. It had already given its approval to Washington's Group Hospitalization, Inc., which sells hospital care (though not hospital medical care) on a prepayment group-insurance basis. It had also given its approval to Washington's Health Security Administration, which seeks to adjust doctors' bills and dentists' bills to their patients' capacity to pay and which also gets hospital dispensary care and hospital medical care for patients who can pay very little or who can pay nothing. The medical society perceived, however, that Group Hospitalization, Inc., and Health Security Administration were not enough. It decided to go farther. Toward that end, as well as toward other ends, it this year acquired what it had never possessed before: a full-time secretary. For that post it chose Theodore Wiprud, of Milwaukee, who had been executive secretary of the Milwaukee Medical Society and who had given much attention to problems of medical economics. On October 6 of this year Mr. Wiprud released to the press a statement which took most of the public by complete surprise. It contained a point-by-point plan for medical care on a group-insurance basis under the auspices of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

I have discussed this plan with Dr. Arthur C. Christy. Dr. Christie approves the plan. He holds that the vice in group health insurance has been that it ordinarily offers a service too large to be delivered competently and permanently. He contends that point five in the medical society plan will cure that vice. Point five is: "Necessary restrictions will be placed upon benefits so that competent service and financial solvency will be assured."

The French Situation

IN A NEW little book called "Our Battle," Henrik van Loon says that autocracy is the result of bad democracy.

DOROTHY THOMPSON

That is certainly true, and France is an example of it. Back in February, this column attempted an analysis of the French economic situation, which has been continually interesting and significant for this country, because France suffered, under the Popular Front government, from all the fallacies of New Dealism, with its puerile ideas of achieving prosperity by drastically raising labor costs and disarranging the public finances, while diminishing all incentive to capital and without regard to increasing production.

A careful watch on France has been most wholesome as a basis of criticism of our own current procedures.

But the French situation has been much worse than ours, first, because its New Dealers went much further; there was a much more serious increase of the public debt there than here; and, added to all her other troubles, France has suffered from a disastrous flight of capital, which amounted to a real hemophilia. And the French ecomonic situation has been further complicated by the European political tensions.

M. PAUL REYNAUD'S plan of financial and economic reform, brought forth early last month, had the prestige of coming from the one financial expert in France who knows what he wants and is usually right, and the Journal Officiel, which carried his decrees, was prefaced by a most lucid and brilliant general report which turned a pitiless light on the economic situation and made it perfectly clear that if France were to recover her economic health, which in turn is a prerequisite for revived military and diplomatic prestige, the workers of France would have to make sacrifices.

However, such conservative publications as the British reviews, The Spectator and The Economist, assert that too much of the burden falls upon the workers.

The Spectator predicted on November 18: "The opposition of the Socialists and the trade unions, even if restrained, will continue. . . . M. Daladier becomes increasingly less concerned to spare the susceptibilities of the workers, and may thus prevent any possibility of creating the period of political calm which is essential to the success of M. Reynaud's plan—which is the last chance of saving France from totalitarianism."

Mr. Thomas Balogh, who as a banker's economist will hardly be suspected of radicalism, stated in the October 15 Economist a thesis advanced in this country by Alexander Sachs, that "the abolition of the social laws alone will not restore confidence . . . a wholly one-sided sacrifice imposed on the workers will not lead to social peace. It demands the end of the scramble of wealthy individuals to protect their personal fortunes . . . but M. Bonnet is more interested in protecting the liberty of French capitalists than the liberty of Europe."

M. Reynaud's plan puts no restrictions on the export of capital. He believes that it can be "persuaded" to rehabilitate itself if the workers can be forced to make concessions.

BUT YOU CANNOT logically take a high hand with labor and give laissez faire to capital.

France, according to these economists, must adopt at least something like the licensing system which this country had in 1934—and abandoned because it ceased to be useful or necessary, since American capital could find no better place to go—and allow capital to leave the country only for legitimate business purposes.

There is today in France such a disruption of confidence that the mere hope of a small or reasonable profit will neither attract capital back to France nor halt the fight of the fluid rentier capital still remaining here.

What the French workers were striking about is also tendential to the foreign policy, which, with its blind dependence upon Britain, has led France into national disaster.

If the result of Bonnet-Daladier authoritarianism has been unprecedented national humiliation, one cannot expect much enthusiasm for this government from the French worker, who hates as much as he desires a 40-hour week.

While he is being asked to relinquish his economic gains, he has also had to accept censorship, the restriction of all his civil liberties, the suspicion of serious mendacity from at least one of his government officials, and the suppression of the most essential facts about Munich.

THE FRENCH WORKER might have been persuaded into making sacrifices for France if the capitalists would do likewise, before Daladier-Bonnet deprived France of her whole scheme of central European defenses and had the face to call this victory and peace.

Now the worker wants to know why, if Munich was such a great triumph for peace, must be sacrifice his privileges in order to increase French armaments?

And he quite reasonably wants to know for what purpose these armaments are to be used, and in whose behalf? To assist Hitler and Mussolini destroy democracy?

A courageous and workable policy, capable of again mobilizing the inate unity and solidarity of the French people, must be truly national, in that it makes just and equal demands upon all parts of the French public, including the capitalists.

AND IT MUST BE accompanied by a truly French foreign policy, and not one dictated in London and Berlin.

If all that is done is to abrogate the social laws, and depend upon that volatile and flickering thing called "confidence" to repatriate capital and stop the drainage of it, then this regime will have to give in constantly to the dictatorships for fear of a financial crisis every time Hitler or Mussolini roar a speech.

The French could learn from Hitler and Mussolini that they cannot mobilize the will of a nation and evoke the spirit of sacrifice while handing away to foreign powers everything that the people of that nation hold dear.

If the government wants the French workmen to arm, they had better make it clear to them that they are arming to protect themselves against further aggrandizement and to restore somewhat a lost position, and not forging weapons to be used against themselves.

Fisheries Bureau Finds Shrimps' Winter Hideout

Say thanks to Milton J. Linder and W. W. Anderson, of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, when you eat those fresh shrimps in the wintertime.

It was they who found where the furtive shrimps lurk when the weather gets cold—and for their pains some 100 fishing boats are now anchored at a point 30 to 40 miles off the central Louisiana coast, and fresh shrimps are obtainable.

Last year they sailed away on the Fisheries' 75-foot boat, the Pelican, and spotted the hideout off the Louisiana coast. According to tidings reaching the Fisheries office here, the shrimps have been found in the same place again this year.

Poker Not Game Of Skill, Britain Rules; Bans It

London, Dec. 1.—Stud poker is illegal when played for money, the Lord Chief Justice of England and two of his associates decided this week.

Lord Howart exhumed the Gaming Houses act of 1854 and cited a ruling given many years ago by Justice Hawkins, who found that unlawful games were "ace of hearts, faro, basset, hazard, passage, roulette and every game of dice, except backgammon, and every game of cards which is not a game of mere skill."

"Whatever might be the degree of skill an experienced player at stud poker might acquire," observed Lord Howart, "that game as described in this case must always remain a game of chance, and in the language of Mr. Justice Hawkins, with reference to baccarat, it would be a perversion of words to say that it was in any sense a game of mere skill."

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Streamlined Politico

POSTMASTER GENERAL (and Democratic national chairman) James A. Farley speaking: "Politics is the national game of the American people—not baseball, or football, or any other athletic game." As a sportsman of politics, Jim Farley tells his story in "Behind the Ballots" (Harcourt, Brace, $3), with that precise passion with which a fisherman will report the successful toss of his line, a football fan the intricacies of a shift play.

He loves it. All his life Jim Farley has been in politics, and most of his life he has done pretty well at it. Before he was 20, up in Grassy Point, he was hauling lazy Democrats to the polling booths. Before he cast his first ballot he had been elected a member of the Rockland County Democratic committee. When he was 22 he ran for town clerk and, aided by the prestige of his prowess as first baseman on the Alpha team, beat the sitting Republican; he served four terms. He was a Democrat because his father had been a Democrat before him; and he sticks to his hereditary guns. At 30 he was county chairman; at 40, in the year Al Smith ran for President and Franklin D. Roosevelt for Governor, he was secretary of the Democratic State committee; four years later, having covered the country meanwhile as a confidential advance salesman of the Roosevelt-for-President movement, he took over on a national scale. He directed the 1932 and 1936 national campaigns, and he doesn't mind admitting that he did a good job.

"I BELIEVE that I have come to know more political leaders throughout the 48 States than any man in the country," he says. When he first ran for town clerk, he wrote letters to every voter in town; he is still writing letters; he believes in using the United States mails. The letter-writing of the Roosevelt preconvention campaign of 1936 "eclipsed anything of its kind ever known before or since in American politics." He writes to 150,000 loyal Democrats throughout the country at least once before every campaign, and a thank-you letter always follows the balloting. He has an intimate list of 2,000 political seers with whom he corresponds constantly. It is with their aid that he makes his uncanny pre-election prophecies.

He signed his letters in green ink to call special attention to them. When he is going strong, he can sign 2,000 letters an hour. If his hand cramps, he holds it "under the cold water for a few moments, then flexes the fingers back and forth, repeating each process until the circulation returns and the hand is normal again." The reader will find all sorts of useful political recipes in "Behind the Ballots."

"AN ABILITY to grasp the little human traits and homely qualities that people like," helped. If Jim Farley found 500 people waiting in a city to look him over, he shook hands with each one personally. He was, he says, "extremely careful to get first and last names correctly." (It must have been the proofreader of this volume who misspelled the name of James Kieran, of the New York Times, got Harry Micajah Daughterty's first name wrong, and once gave Frank C. Walker the wrong middle initial.) And, when greeting the citizens, he says, he never disputed the views of others if it was at all possible to agree. "It always creates a bad impression to start off with an argument."

MAKE NO MISTAKE, Jim Farley is no Tammany shyster. His politics are streamlined, and he believes passionately in his new model. What he most bitterly resents are charges that he used his office for personal gain. That he has used it to help his chief achieve his chief's program seems to him a service to the American people.

The book includes many absorbing political yarns. Mr. Farley retells the story of his troubles on the New York State Boxing Commission, when Tex Rickard did not want to waste money pitting Jack Dempsey against Harry Wills, a Negro with scant box-office charm. He tells of the convention campaign of 1932 with a scientist's precision and an artist's passion, reciting the story of the release of the Garner delegates in particular detail. Hearst had little to do with it, he holds. The "Hello, You Old Potato" story was a newspaperman's invention, according to Mr. Farley. He thinks that if President Roosevelt had spoken in Maine in 1936, Vermont might have been left the sole State in the Republican column.

He says that he has been careful never to discuss the third-term question with President Roosevelt, and he does not expect the President to say a word about it for some time to come; to do so would be "the worst tactics imaginable." My guess is that Jim Farley's guess is that he will. Let the reader make what he can of this: "The Democratic Party will select a thoroughgoing party member for its Presidential candidate in 1940, and this candidate will be elected."

'Gagging At Progress'

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Liberty League Again

THE MOST PRANKISH New Dealer, if given a free hand to manipulate the Republican National Committee, could not have pleased his fancy more perfectly than the Republicans themselves did.

LINDLEY

By electing former Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, to its executive committee, the Republican National Committee hoisted the banner of the American Liberty League. Senator Hastings, on his record, stands as far to the right as the American political front extends. Moreover, he is a representative of the du Pont interests. On the whole roster of prominent Republican politicians there is no other so well suited to serve as a target for the Democrats—unless it is Herbert Hoover, who, in fact, is something of a liberal in comparison with Mr. Hastings.

To honor Mr. Hastings, the Republican National Committee had to rebuff Kenneth Simpson, who has revived a decaying party in New York by putting up younger and more liberal candidates. He failed to elect his candidate for Governor, Thomas A. Dewey. But the defeat was by a very narrow margin. Considering that the Democrats had been giving the State excellent government for 16 consecutive years and that they had an exceptionally strong candidate in Gov. Lehman, Mr. Dewey's race was remarkable. In several other States the tactics advocated and practiced by Mr. Simpson were successful.

THE CRY OF DISMAY from the straight Republican New York Herald Tribune testifies to the importance of the action of the Republican National Committee. In an editorial entitled "Gagging at Progress," the Herald Tribune said:

"Nothing could be plainer than that the standpatters are still powerful in the party and have still to learn their first lesson in progress . . . The point of view exhibited carries . . . a plenty of depression. What the party needs above all else is newness. It needs new candidates, new eyesight, new power of imagination and creative thought."

The Republican National Committee, it is true, is not the only medium of expression for the party, although its headquarters in Washington are a fountain of publicity. During the next year and a half a Republican record will be written by Republican Senators and Representatives and by the new lot of Republican Governors. The record is sure to be a splotchy mixture of progress and reaction.

REPUBLICANS of the type of Senator McNary, minority leader, and Senator Capper never had much respect for either the Hooverites or the pro-Hoover Old Guard. The probable Republican leader of the House, Joseph W. Martin jr., is several shades less conservative than the retiring minority leader, Bertrand H. Snell, of New York. And Mr. Martin's Massachusetts colleague, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., is several shades more progressive than Mr. Martin.

The Republican Party in Congress ranges from Senator Borah to Representative James W. Wadsworth, which is almost as broad a front as is covered by the Democratic-Progressive coalition. The new Republican Governors cover the right (as in Pennsylvania and Michigan), the middle (as in Ohio and Massachusetts), and the left center (as in Minnesota).

Who will be the more influential in shaping the future of their party—the Republicans in Congress or the Republicans in the State capitols—is an open question. The Democratic record in Congress did not contribute much to the policies which the Democratic Party embraced in 1932. The Roosevelt program had its roots in New York and in Western agrarianism.

THE REPUBLICANS most talked-of now for the next Presidential nomination include Senators Vandenberg and Lodge, Senator-elect Taft of Ohio, and Representative Barton, of New York. They have to stand up and be counted for or against any number of issues on which public opinion and the opinion of their own party is divided.

The possibility of victory in the next Presidential election should have been a unifying influence on the Republicans, just as the presence of a more formidable opposition should have on the Democrats. But in both parties the struggle to gain control in 1940 will work in the contrary direction.

The elevation of former Senator Hastings is proof that the Republican Party still has a potent right wing. Whatever its size in terms of voters, it has access to big campaign contributions, and it controls the party machinery in a good many States.

The feelings of the Republicans who want new faces and more liberal policies can be understood sympathetically by the New Dealers. The old guard doesn't seem to purge any more easily in one party than in the other.

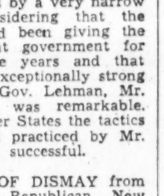
The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

PERSONAL note to REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT RAMSPECK: Your effort to push through a bill extending civil service beyond the June 24 executive orders is praiseworthy and everyone hopes you a quick success. You are quoted in the public prints as saying:



MILDRED SCHWARTZ

"President Roosevelt has repeatedly urged extension of the civil service, and I don't see where my bill can be opposed."

Alas, Mr. Ramspeck, we do see where it can be opposed. Won't the place be in the Senate Civil Service Committee, where, barring a miracle, SENATOR McKELLAR, Democrat, of Tennessee, will be sitting? This is not intended as any discouragement; it is simply a hint for you to fix your sails for any sort of wind.

ANENT the "Miss Civil Service" award: What's wanted at the moment are some nominations of women in the older age groups. Obviously, age has nothing to do with an ideal worker, and the ideal employe is the very basis of the award. The silver loving cup will be for the woman regarded as the most meritorious in her work, and the judges who will decide the contest won't be disposed to the view that life ends at 40 or 50 or 60. Again, beauty has nothing to do with the case; age has nothing to do with the case, and the length of time you have served in the Government may not matter too much. The field is by no means restricted to employes of the Civil Service Commission; any woman employed by the Federal Government within the District of Columbia may be nominated, provided she has civil service status.

We have pleasure in presenting another nominee, MISS MILDRED SCHWARTZ, of New York City, an employe at the Civil Service Commission.

A CHRISTMAS departure in union activity on the part of an A. F. G. E. local in a Virginia city appeals to this column. The local is composed of veterans' facility employes who don't make much money. They had accumulated a little money in the common till, and being employes whose hours are long (some averaging 60 or 70 hours a week), it might have been supposed that they would seize upon the Christmas holidays to pitch a rip-roaring dance, or otherwise hold the money over until next summer and swing a barbecue. Rather, they will use the treasury to buy clothing and Christmas presents for their children.

NOTES: S. M. Barrett, of Interior, who made the I. D. R. A. what it is today, calls in to say that a bevy of PWA, Interior and USHA girls will be nominated in the "Miss Civil Service" field on Monday. "Expect a crowd at 5 p. m. Monday," says O. K. We're delighted to have them. . . . Incidentally, the I. D. R. A. holds an election this afternoon of a president, first and second vice presidents, secretary and treasurer. The Executive Committee, from whose membership officers are chosen, consists of: Paul S. Bergh and Howard R. Stinson, Secretary's Office; John H. Lloyd, Office of Education; S. W. Crosthwait and John C. Marchant, Indian Affairs; Pierce M. Rice, General Land Office; H. H. Hughes, Bureau of Mines; E. J. Kelly, H. A. Tolson and H. L. Wooten, Park Service; W. R. Nelson, Reclamation; C. R. Graham, Geological Survey; J. L. Acuff, R. L. Dunbar, R. A. Kappler, Dorothy Richardson, C. A. King, PWA; Jasper L. Lenkins, Frank Rose and Anne Munkavich, Housing Authority. The 1938 officers are: S. W. Crosthwait, president; Howard R. Stinson, first vice president; E. J. Kelly, second vice-president; H. A. Tolson, secretary, and E. J. Armstrong, treasurer.

W. FLOYD MUTCHLER can meditate and reminisce on his long service in the Civil Service Commission, after his retirement Wednesday, between long puffs from a good briar pipe his fellow workers gave him in token of leave-taking. Mr. Mutchler has been in the service since December 8, 1894, his original appointment being in the GPO. He served the Civil Service Commission continuously since July 1, 1905, and in recent years was employed in the Examining Division. Another leave-taking gift was a handsome traveling bag.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: At a big reception a foreign diplomat was finessed out of his collapsible high hat; and the only hat left over was a non-collapsible derby . . . Ask Harry Hopkins about the picture he was forced to pose with the President just after his small daughter, Diana, had misbehaved in lap . . .

Dorothy & Marion . . . rival ladies

* * * *

It's difficult to ascertain an Army officer's rank when he's in full dress uniform at a reception, so one Senator plays safe by calling every man in uniform "General"—including admirals. So far he has had no complaints.

Which reminds me that the b. w. recently addressed four-star General Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, as "colonel;" that gallant gentleman didn't bat an eye.

* * * *

Occasionally an Ambassador telephones the State Department to find out which lady will be sitting next to him at the next formal dinner. (If the Italian Ambassador, for example, were to sit next to the wife of the Spanish Ambassador, their conversation might be a bit stiffish.) . . .

Sometimes changes are arranged at the last minute—as, for example, a 5-foot Ambassador was assigned as dinner partner for a 6-foot lady twice in a row.

". . . the general reads with music"

Among the more unusual parties given in Washington are those by Lieut. Gen. von Boetticher, the German Military and Air attache . . . To entertain his guests the doughty general is apt to climb up on a low dais and read aloud from Shakespeare, in a half-darkened room, with soft piano accompaniment. . .

* * * *

Seated in a semi-circle, the guests are agog as General von Boetticher begins to read, but gradually they grow more solemn and eerie . . . About the time Banquo's ghost seems to have edged into the room, the General concludes, the lights go on, and an excellent supper, with imported beer and champagne is served. The guests recover swiftly.

* * * *

Motivated apparently by genuine patriotism, Congressman Martin Dies has been veering away from what seemed to be a mild flirtation with fascism toward the attitude of regarding both communism and fascism with equal horror.

Right now he contends privately to friends that the big peril from "American communism" is that it is being used by a few bigshots as a provocation and excuse for fomenting fascism . . .

But no one seems to listen to him except when he is calling Hal Ickes, Frances Perkins and Harry Hopkins names; and all of these are as earthily 100 per cent American as Dies himself.

". . . sorry, gotta go"

If Washington gossip could be mirrored in one of those conventional group pictures of the President and his Cabinet, it would certainly show seven of the ten getting up from their chairs as if about to leave . . . During the last few months rumor has had all except Wallace, Ickes and Hull on the way out.

Actually, a maximum of three may shift before 1940, and two would be a better bet.

So loyal is F. D. R. that he ponders for years before dismissing even a servant who has been remiss.

* * * *

At present, the personnel and complexion of the Cabinet strikingly resembles that of a schoolboard in a city of 100,000 . . . This is no slur; schoolboards usually get more competent members than city councils . . . If these ten were on the Middletown, Ohio, schoolboard, they'd probably tolerate a few new-fangled wrinkles, vote against esthetic dancing and cooking classes for boys, and insist on keeping Latin in the compulsory curriculum.

* * * *

OF THEE I SING: Of Secretary Woodring's 1½-year-old son, who already goes to Sunday school . . . Of those two extraordinarily charming ladies who head the women's divisions at Democratic and G. O. P. headquarters, Miss Martin and Mrs. Tom McAllister; I'd like to hear them argue some evening . . . Of the Washington nabob who offered to share his motor car with a diplomatic attache, so he could get a "DPL" (diplomatic) license tag and park near water plugs.

Mother Freed In Gun Death Of Md. Girl

Shooting Accidental Soldier's Testimony Jury Acquits Woman

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 1.—A jury in Circuit Court deliberated only a few minutes today before acquitting Mrs. Susan Bowers, 34, charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of her 13-year-old daughter, Frances, at their home in Pinesburg last August.

The verdict followed testimony of Samuel Dukes, a soldier from the Carlisle, Pa., barracks and a guest at the Bowers home on the night of the tragedy, that the shotgun was discharged accidentally when he sought to wrest it from Mrs. Bowers' hands.

The child was shot through the abdomen and died the following day in Washington County Hospital here.

The defense maintained from the start of the trial that the shooting was accidental, but State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram charged Mrs. Bowers, angered because children were throwing pebbles against a window, fired the gun deliberately.

Mrs. Bowers' 64-year-old husband and their other three children were spectators during the trial. Bowers was serving a jail sentence for an offense against Frances, at the time of the shooting.

Frederick Bar Asks Weinberg As Circuit Judge

Recommended to Nice For 6th Circuit Post Urner Retires Monday

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Dec. 1.—The Frederick Bar Association recommended to Gov. Harry W. Nice, today appointment of Leo Weinberg, Frederick lawyer, to succeed Chief Judge Hammond Urner on the bench of the Sixth Judicial Circuit.

Judge Urner, a Republican, will retire Monday when he reaches the age of 70. B. B. Rosenstock, association secretary, said Gov. Nice requested that the bar group furnish him a list of five Republican attorneys from which he might select a successor.

Only five members of the bar association were considered eligible, since the others hold positions barring them from consideration, and only two other names were submitted. Second choice was Holden S. Felton and third was Waller E. Sinn.

The association adopted a unanimous resolution favoring Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard for chief judge of the circuit.

Weinberg was the Republican nominee for attorney general in the last election. He was defeated by Democrat William C. Walsh, of Cumberland.

Test Cases to Tax HOLC Fail in Md.

Annapolis, Dec. 1 (AP).—Two attempts to tax the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and its employes were lost by the State of Maryland today on adverse rulings by the Court of Appeals.

The State failed in its attempt to collect recordation taxes on HOLC mortgages and to impose State income taxes on salaries paid Maryland HOLC employes when the appellate court affirmed rulings of the Baltimore Superior Court.

The court, in a precedent-setting Maryland decision, held that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was by "origin, control, function and statutory designation" a Federal instrumentality, and as such exempt from State taxation.

County Blocs Proposed in Va. For Economy

To End Overlapping Survey Funds Asked 'Complete Study' Sought

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., Dec. 1.—Dean Raymond B. Pinchbeck of the University of Richmond, chairman of the Virginia Commission on County Government, proposed today an 11-point program to expedite the administrative work of Virginia's 100 counties.

Speaking before a meeting of the Virginia League of Counties, Dean Pinchbeck suggested an immediate appropriation made by the General Assembly for "a complete study of the 30 or 40 national economic, social, cultural and geographical regions" of the State.

He said under the plan it would not be necessary to eliminate or consolidate any of the existing counties, but that they could be grouped for co-operative action.

The plan further provided that the boards of supervisors and other officials of the counties within the "shires" prepare annual budgets, exchange views on administrative procedures and problems, and study together the ways and means of "eliminating duplicating or overlapping school and other governmental services, facilities and costs."

PWA Approves Plans $427,000 Project To Begin by Jan. 11

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 1.—Preliminary PWA approval of plans for the new $427,000 women's prison at Jessups was announced here today by Henry G. Perring, architect for the project. He said work would begin by January 11.

Contracts totaling $78,923 for a sewage treatment plant, sewers and water mains already have been awarded, Perring said. The prison will be ready for occupancy in January, 1940.

The six buildings, planned to house about 175 prisoners, are being financed by a PWA grant of $192,000 and $235,000 in State bonds. No facilities for segregating women prisoners in separate institutions are provided in Maryland at present.

Mere 1,843 Wed As Elkton Begins To Feel 'Pinch'

Elkton, Md., Dec. 1 (AP).—Marrying parsons in this "Gretna Green" felt the pinch of depression in their hasty wedding mart for the first time during November, as their business charts dipped to a mere 1,843 marriages.

Figures compiled for the last full month of unhampered business before the new 48-hour intermission between license and marriage becomes law on December 8, showed a drop of 501 marriages from October, the peak in Elkton's 25-year history as a purveyor to "weddings without waiting."

If it was any consolation for the six parsosn who share the business the business statistics showed November brought 1,013 more romantic customers than the same month a year ago.

New York State sent 545 couples here, and New Jersey, 492.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 1.—Rules against Mayor Roy Smith of Virginia Beach and Sergeant C. A. White of Princess Anne County Circuit Court today on motion of Commonwealth's Attorney Paul W. Ackiss, jr., who announced to the court he did not have sufficient evidence to support the charges.

The action followed the resignation of Chief of Police N. L. McClanan of the resort, announced yesterday, who was scheduled to have appeared before Judge White today on a similar rule.

Perjury charges against M. Perdue and A. W. Szalkay, slot machine operators, returned by the grand jury are to be tried some time during the December term of Princess Anne Circuit Court.

79% of Farms In Va. Found Mortgage-Free

Status Seen Healthy Result of Past Success FHA Head Reports

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1.—C. C. Barksdale, State director of the FHA, said today a recent economic survey made of Virginia's farms indicated that farming conditions in the State were good.

The survey showed that 21 per cent of Virginia's 197,632 farms were mortgaged. The 43,451 farms represented in the 21 per cent had mortgages totaling $75,128,000 and averaging $1,729.

"I would say from this picture," Mr. Barksdale said, "that Virginia's farmers through the past have been very successful. Therefore, there are comparatively few of the farms mortgaged. The percentage of mortgages is less than in many other States in the country."

The survey showed the total value of farms of the State to be $596,854,761, or an average value of $3,004.

"The survey shows further that only 11 per cent of Virginia counties are classified as being in a poor condition," Barksdale said.

"Hence 89 per cent of the counties in the State are classified as being in a fair or good condition.

"We mean by these classifications that the general conditions which include production, sale and stabilization of the farms, are, as classified, poor, fair or good."

No single section of the State was classified as poor.

PWA Assigns $440,397 for Sewer Work

Aid for Prince Georges Montgomery Benefits U. S. Paying 45 Per Cent

PWA Administrator Ickes announced yesterday President Roosevelt had approved a $440,397 grant to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for construction of sewer lines, pumping stations and a sewage disposal plant in the Bladensburg (Md.) area.

The Federal grant will finance 45 per cent of a proposed $978,661 sewage disposal system, which, Sanitary Commission officials say will solve the pollution problem in the Anacostia valley by eliminating dumping of untreated sewage in the river.

The Sanitary Commission will raise its share of the cost, $538,264, by a bond issue.

A dozen communities in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties will be benefited by the new sewage system.

Areas Affected

The principal areas to be affected in Montgomery County will be Takoma Park and Silver Spring.

Included among these allotments were:

A loan and grant to the District of $5,377,000 for improvements to the sewage system, principally in the Rock Creek area.

A loan and grant of $4,125,000 to the District for construction of the Blue Plains treatment plant.

A grant of $88,500 to the District for extension of its sewer system.

A grant of $160,000 to the Navy Department for sewage treatment works at the Anacostia Naval Air Station, the Naval Magazine at Bellevue and the Marine Barracks at Quantico.

Arlington Gets Grant

A grant of $54,000 to the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for a $120,000 sewer-improvement program in Montgomery County.

A loan and grant of $2,778,000 to Arlington County for construction of a comprehensive system of sewers and disposal system for the entire county.

With the elimination of stream pollution in the Anacostia basin now virtually assured, it was announced by Col. R. S. Thomas, Army engineer, that the flood-control survey of the river valley was approximately 60 per cent complete. An allotment of $100,000 was made last June from the War Department flood control fund for this purpose.

In co-operation with the Army survey parties, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is proceeding with land purchases in Prince Georges County, it was announced.

In Prince Georges County, the system will eliminate stream pollution in Bladensburg, Cottage City, Colmar Manor, Mount Rainer, Hyattsville, Brentwood, North Brentwood, Riverdale, East Riverdale and Edmonston.

Work is expected to start within several weeks on the first phase of the project, the laying of five miles of sewer pipe and construction of three pumping stations. One station will be built on Grape street in Hyattsville at a cost of $42,860; another on Highland avenue in Hyattsville at a cost of $19,050 and the third on Lenox avenue in Colmar Manor at a cost of 14,285.

Project to Cost $700,000

The new sewage treatment plant will be located near River road about a mile from Bladensburg on property now owned by the Sanitary Commission. The estimated cost of the plant is approximately $700,000.

The sewer system for the Bladensburg area was described by the PWA as "the essential keystone in the co-ordinated plan to minimize stream and river pollution in the vicinity of Washington."

The PWA has made 10 previous grants in Washington and neighboring counties for elimination of river pollution.

Zoning Law Plans Change In Montgomery

Legalizing Believed Out Money Granted Anyway Board May Drop Idea

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 8313 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

The Montgomery County Commissioners are expected to withdraw their suggestion that the violations of the zoning law now in effect in the county be legalized, The Post learned last night from a member of the board.

The board will meet today at Rockville to arrange for signing the Capper-Cramton act bonds for development of county parks. It is expected that since the money for the bonds is forthcoming without suspension of the zoning laws the commissioners will vote to withdraw their suggestion to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission that the laws be suspended.

The commissioners were concerned with freeing approximately $500,000 in Federal money for parks which was being held up because of a suit attacking the constitutionality of the park and planning act, one member of the board said yesterday. Since the action of the board 10 days ago, county officials have been assured that the money would be forthcoming without the drastic steps which were suggested by the commissioners.

Many Protested

Announcement of the proposal by the board brought forth a storm of protest from civic leaders, including the executive and advisory committees of the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Civic leaders who opposed the suspension of zoning said they had no particular fault to find with the legalization of most of the violations which came about through the depression needs of home owners and resulted in apartments and flats being constructed in dwellings located in one-family residence areas, but that they fear widespread violations might ensue between the time the suspension is announced and the new effective date of the zoning laws.

Lacy Shaw, part commissioner, has announced that the park and planning commission will take no action today on the suggestion, and that a public hearing will be held if the suspension of rules is looked upon favorably by the commission.

Schools Decentralized

Montgomery County schools will not be constructed in monumental fashion in the future, but in decentralized units which will conform with the residential nature of the neighborhoods, Superintendent of Schools Edwin W. Broome announced yesterday in asking for bids on five new schools and two additions to cost about $275,000.

The construction will provide classroom space for 1,000 pupils and will relieve overcrowding in the areas involved, Dr. Broome said. In the Massachusetts avenue extended area an elementary school is to be built, and Takoma Park is to have a junior high school. Three colored elementary schools are to be built at Laytonsville, Sellman and Wheaton.

Three-room additions will be built at Gaithersburg and Poolesville. Bids for these will be opened December 12 as will bids on the three colored schools. The bids on the two suburban schools will be opened December 13.

The Takoma Park Junior High School is to be on the Hodges tract at Saratoga avenue, and will consist of a central building of ten classrooms and another building which will house the auditorium, shops for boys and girls, showers and dressing rooms, and a cafeteria. It also will have outdoor play courts and recreation areas. The building, which will accommodate about 300, will cost approximately $142,000.

The school for the Massachusetts avenue extended area will be built on Baltimore avenue, three blocks from Massachusetts avenue extended. It is to have one central unit of two stories, to house six rooms; two one-classroom wings, and workrooms. The building will cost about $79,0000. The school will accommodate 300.

The three colored schools will be wooden frame buildings with two classrooms and a workroom each, and will care for about 70 children. They will cost about $4,600 each.

The additions at Gaithersburg and Poolesville will provide space for approximately 125 each and will include a room with a stage suitable for assemblies. The Gaithersburg building is to cost about $21,000 and the Poolesville approximately $19,650.

Robert Herbert Deane, also known as Herbert R. Deane, who pleaded guilty to bigamy yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court, at Rockville, Md., was sentenced by Judge Charles W. Woodward to serve four months in the House of Correction.

Terrapin Dish Will Lure Gourmets Here

Dinner Set Thursday
Chefs Revere Turtle Dish
Maryland MethodSupreme

By The Post Food Editor.

ALMOST lost to the present generation of rush-and-hurry eaters is diamond-back terrapin. This once celebrated native dish will be revived next week, when a group of gourmets will assemble to revel over the delicacy of this appetizer.

Chefs from San Francisco to Singapore solemnly agree that only two methods of preparation are worthy of this delicately flavored sea food. One method is Terrapin a la Baltimore. The other, Terrapin a la Maryland, will serve as the theme song for a festive dinner to be given for local epicures at the Raleigh Hotel's Pall Mall Room, Thursday of next week.

"Papa Jarrin," the chef of this hotel, is preparing the small American turtle himself. Local hostesses with a penchant for gastronomic delicacies can purchase terrapin (bottled and ready for a tasty cooking) from their favorite delicatessens. The Sauce Maryland, however, is another thing. Good recipes for this are difficult to find, so that the following formula, obtained from Maitre d'Hotel Marchissio, should find a valuable place in local homemakers' cooking files:

Terrapin a la Maryland

Warm desired amount of diced terrapin in chafing dish or double boiler. An average terrapin allows for 4 or 5 servings. Add 3 or 4 large tablespoons of sweet butter, keeping heat low until melted. Add a dash of celery salt to taste. Pour in a medium-sized glass of either sherry or port. Let this simmer for five minutes. Add 2 tablespoons of heavy cream for extra richness if desired. When well blended serve on cornmeal biscuit, toast or beaten biscuit.

But, as Marchissio remarks, "mellow terrapin such as this cannot be described. It must be eaten to be experienced."

Wild Turkey and Terrapin Menu

Canape Eastern Shore
Pot-au-feu Managere
Croutes gratinees
Diamond-back terrapin a la Maryland
Roast Virginia wild turkey
Mountaineer dressing
Cranberry sauce
Candied yams Louisiana

Consumers Counsel

Advice on Food

Merge Mushrooms, Sprouts Spicy Apple Butter Yams Are Dressed Up

AFTER an absence of a week from the food pages, the Consumer's Counsel returns to offer household advice, answer homemaking queries, publish home-tested culinary discoveries and suggest antidotes for that after-Thanksgiving let-down feeling.

Several resourceful food fanciers have submitted ideas for preparation of mushrooms, spinach, sweet potatoes and other seasonable foods.

Also in answer to readers' requests for time and money-saving ideas, several tested household hints are included. Mail all Consumer questions and suggestions to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor.

Inasmuch as there are almost 30 varieties of mushrooms being enjoyed today, and since this great delicacy is locally plentiful and unusually reasonable now, any new method of preparing this dainty vegetable should be heartly received by local gourmets. Mrs. Joan Malone, Woodley Park Towers, has stumbled across just such a recipe which combines Brussels sprouts with the tasty mushroom. She writes:

"I believe I have acted the Columbus to a new and delectable combination of vegetables at the time when these foods are at the height of their goodness.

"Fresh mushrooms, which are meaty and heavy right now, and Brussels sprouts, which are at their zenith of perfection, are delicious when combined. Here is what I mentally concocted, tried out, guinea pig fashion, on myself first and then served with much pomp and circumstance to my husband.

Meat Substitute

"Slowly and carefully cook any desired amount of whole mushrooms until they are golden brown. It is best to saute them in butter, but not so long as to darken the butter. Meanwhile, boil desired amount of Brussels sprouts in salt water until tender. Both operations require about 20 minutes. Remove the mushrooms from the butter and keep hot on a plate while the well-drained sprouts are heated in the same butter in which the mushrooms were cooked. Place mushrooms in ring around the mound of sprouts, dusting all with white pepper and a dot of butter on top of this dish. This is an economical entree, for no butter is wasted in this process and the mushrooms take the place of meat. Served with a border of rice, and followed by a beverage and fruit salad, this is a satisfying and well balanced meal."

Mrs. Haile Chisholm, Garrett Park, Md., has requested one of the most seasonable of the harvest bread spreads. She has asked for a really spicy recipe for apple butter. Here is a formula which even the Pennsylvania Dutch apple butter makers would approve:

Apple Butter

Cut into small pieces, enough apples to make 1 quart. Add 8 whole cloves, 4 inches of stick cinnamon, and enough cider or water to cover. Cook until very soft and drain through cheese cloth. Save the juice for spiced apple juice cocktail. Rub pulp through a sieve and to 2 cups of apple juice add juice of 1 lemon and boil 1 minute. Add 1 cup of sugar and ½ cup of pectin and cook over a low flame, stirring constantly until of the desired consistency.

From Breezy Point, Md., Mrs. E. S. Warder sends other food page readers this appetizing suggestion for the preparation of yams. Few tips could be more helpful at the moment—for this vegetable is very economical at present.

How to Keep Lemons Camphor Cleans Cards Trouser De-shining Easy

"Down here on Chesapeake Bay we have just finished curing and storing our sweet potatoes. Perhaps some of your food page readers could offer additional suggestions as to how to pep up preparation of this delicious tuber. I personally can offer this old-time recipe from my mother's family, back in Louisiana. This method is different from the usual recipe.

Sweet Potato Recipe

"Peel and slice lengthwise six sweet potatoes which have been boiled in their skins. Sprinkle with ¼ cup of granulated sugar. Set to cool. In heavy metal skillet melt ½ cup of butter and stir in a cup of dark brown sugar. When bubbling, add small glass of apple jelly and ½ cup of boiling water. Cook 5 minutes very slowly. In buttered baking dish, spread halved sweets. Pour over them the sugar and apple syrup. Place in medium oven for 20 minutes. On a large platter, place thin slices of oranges; on these place candied sweets, sprinkle with a little ground mace and serve very hot.

Recipe Judges

Tomorow morning three experienced homemakers will sit in judgment over this week's onion recipe finalists. All of these judges are endowed with practical knowledge in the arts of the hostess and housewife. Their active participation in past Post contests and their observances and imagination in the culinary field will stand them in good stead when they assemble to decide their fellow contestants' fates for five recipe cash prizes. The jurors will be: Mrs. Margaret King, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, Mrs. S. M. Garwood, 4615 Reno road northwest and Mrs. M. V. Osborne, 415 Gallatin street northwest.

Fruit Cakes New Contest Theme

Fruit cake will play the leading role in next week's recipe contest. In response to numerous requests for both light and dark fruit cake recipes, the Food Editor is opening the contest to this problem. Both Mrs. Lulu C. Medeiros, 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Miss Evelyn Wiesbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest, have been especially ardent in championing the cause of the holiday cake.

If you have a favorite, tested recipe for a Christmas fruit cake, for a spicy nut-filled cake, for either a light or dark raisin and citron-filled cake, enter them at once in this new competition. Your sense of proportions, blending of ingredients and unique ideas in this cake-baking category may win for you one of five cash awards. First prize is $3, second, $2, and there are three additional awards of $1 each. Mail all carefully written entries to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor. Closing date is December 10.

SPANISH RICE

Cook 1-3 cup of bacon in a frying pan until crisp. Add and brown tablespoons of minced onions, 3 tablespoons of minced green peppers, and 3 tablespoons of minced celery. Add 2 cups of boiled rice and cook slowly until it has browned. This browning will add a delicious flavor to food. Add ¼ teaspoon of paprka, ⅛ teaspoon of sale, 1 teaspoon of minced parsley and 2 cups of tomatoes. Let simmer for 10 minutes or until thick.

Tasty Jelly Mold

Add cooked pineapple, apple or peach slices to your next cranberry jelly mold. The combination will be unusually good with chops, roasts and duck.

Sauces Entered in This Week's Recipe Contest Are Designed to Add Zest to All Types of Food

Poet Submits Verse Spanish Entry Wins Horseradish Also

By Alice Clayton.
The Post Food Editor.

SAUCES designed to give zest to all types of food were entered in The Post's recipe contest last week. There were creamy sauces, wine sauces, mild sauces and tart sauces. So popular was the sauce contest that one contestant, Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, of Baltimore, broke into rhyme, submitting the following verse:

"While dreaming, dreaming,
Don't forget—vanilla sauce
And plenty of hard sauce, too,
And great big chunks of ginger bread,
And a sea of oyster stew.

"While dreaming, dreaming,
Let us have stewed terrapin,
And big, thick hot mince pie,
And a mountain of cheese—
when I think of it,
I want to curl right up and die.
Not curl right up and die?
Yes? Curl right up and die."

Winning Entry

First award of $3.00 was given to Mrs. Cecilia S. Abdo, 510 F street northeast, for a racy Spanish sauce. Three judges agreed that her onion-spiked sauce was easy to prepare. The base of tomato juice was considered ideal for chopped ham, celery, carrots, and, for that matter, for any left-over meats or vegetables. Spanish sauce has a definite flavor, spicy enough to pep up an inexpensive dish of rice and salad greens.

Spanish Sauce

Melt 2 tablespoons of shortening, add 1½ tablespoons of chopped onion and fry until brown. Add 2 tablespoons of flour, ½ teaspoon of salt and a few grains of cayenne and pepper. Mix well. Add 1 cup of strained tomato juice and bring slowly to a boil, stirring constantly. Add 3 tablespoons of cooked chopped ham, 3 of cooked, chopped celery and 2 tablespoons of chopped, cooked carrots. Serve hot.

Strong Flavor

Second prize of $2 has been awarded to Mrs. Pauline Gross, 323 Kennedy street northwest. Her horse-radish cream sauce has flavor strong enough to be recalled for weeks after. Of interest to housewives, and their husbands, too, is the value which such a tart sauce will present in enlivening boiled beef brisket, corned beef and any number of other humble meats. Caution! A miserly touch is all that is necessary when serving this strong sauce.

MRS. GROSS

Horseradish sauce

Whip ½ cup of cream until stiff and place on ice. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs until lemon colored. Add 5 tablespoons of drained fresh horseradish, 1 tablespoon of lemon juice, 2 to 6 drops of tarragon vinegar, a pinch of salt and 6 balanced chopped almonds. Mix thoroughly and add to the whipped cream, stirring steadily until well blended. Serve cold with boiled beef, fried fish or cold roasts of any kind. This recipe makes 2 to 2½ cups of delicious sauce.

The three contest judges above are pondering the merits of entries submitted in last week's sauce recipe contest. After much good natured debate and mental balancing of the most formidable of their saucy entries, they awarded Post cash prizes to their sauce choices. The judges are Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2020 I street northwest; Mrs. Charles F. Marvin, jr., 6005 Thirty-fourth place northwest, and Mrs Charles N. Malone, Woodley Park Towers, northwest

Saucy Appetizer

Mrs. Mary Graham Ireland, 719 Third street northeast also won favor with the contest judges this week. They felt that her cold creole sauce was both different and economical to prepare. They agreed with Mrs. Ireland that this relishing sauce would be of special value as a cocktail flavoring for shrimps, raw oysters and other sea foods.

MRS. IRELAND

Cold Creole Sauce

Combine the following ingredients, in the order given; ½ cup of tomato ketchup, tablespoon of mayonnaise, 3 tablespoons of horseraddish, 2 tablespoons of minced olives and 4 drops of tobasco sauce. Blend well and serve as a garnish for fried oysters or fresh fish. A small portion of the sauce may be placed in a paper cup or small glass, on each plate beside the food it is to accompany.

Frequent Contributor

Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, a consistent contributor to contests, already has been honored with an award, but the judges felt her rum sauce recipe was so pleasing that she has been awarded a $1 prize.

MISS RYAN

Rum Sauce

Mix ½ cup of sugar and 1 tablespoon of cornstarch and add 1 cup of boiling water gradually, stirring constantly. Boil 5 minutes and remove from heat and beat in 2 tablespoons of butter, 1 tablespoon of lemon juice, 3 tablespoons of rum and a few grains of salt. Serve hot over fruit or nut pudding.

For Ham Perfection

Mrs. Blanche V. Chancellor, 1400 Twenty-ninth street southeast, has been awarded a $1 prize for a sprightly raisin sauce. All three contest judges agreed this brown-tinted dish was well blended and just right for immediate service along with baked ham or roast fowl. Mrs. Chancellor's combination of vinegar with brown sugar and raisins was considered to possess just the right amount of sharpness to the butter and other ingredients.

Raisin Sauce

Mix together ½ cup of brown sugar, firmly packed, with 3 tablespoons of cornstarch and a few grains of salt. Add 1½ cups of water or cup of water and ½ cup of orange juice. Add 2 tablespoons of butter. Cook 10 minutes, stirring constantlfl Add ¼ cup of vinegar, and ½ cup of seedless raisins. Return to fire and cook until raisins are plumped and the mixtures has begun to boil. Serve hot or cold. This recipe makes about 2 cups of sauce.

Too Much Salt.

If food is too salty, place a wet cloth over the top of the vessel which is cooking. The steam will draw the salt into the cloth.

Soviet Girls Find Work Nonreducing

Position Is Everything

By Ida Jean Kain.

NOT SO long ago the world pricked up its ears at the report that Russian women were once more interested in beauty and cosmetics. This announcement did not really surprise any of us, because all women are born with equal rights to the pursuit of beauty and not even a government can keep them from exercising that right.

Now Russian women want to know the latest wrinkle in reducing in America, and this request unexpectedly proves another point for us . . . Work is not reducing. If the manual labor done by the Russian women does not keep their figures slim and lovely, then we can conclude once and for all that no work is streamlining . . . And that is that.

From our experience we can tell the Russian women that the latest thing in reducing is streamlining exercise, and that position is everything. An exercise need not be particularly vigorous, but to be streamlining it must be performed in the position which uses the particular set of muscles which need firming.

Basic Exercise Easy

For instance, the basic exercise for streamlining the midsection involves little activity. You lie on your back on the floor with the knees flexed and the feet on the floor and draw up and in with the lower abdominal muscles to touch the small of the back to the floor. This exercise is extremely easy but it makes for firm muscles, a flat tummy.

To make this position serve for waistline exercise—and very slimming exercise at that—give it a twist. Hold the knees together and twist at the waist, first to one side and then to the other so that alternate thighs rest on the floor. Try to keep the upper part of the back flat on the floor, focusing the movement at the waist and rolling the hips.

Upward Stretch Helps

Another splendid reducer for the waistline is the easy upward stretch, also combined with the twist. In principle, this position is just the reverse of the one preceding. Instead of holding the back still, try to hold the hips squarely to the front, moving the trunk. Simply stand erect, hands clasped high overhead and stretching upward. Then twist at the waist from one side to the other, keeping the hips as still as possible. Stretching and twisting give the figure that spare rib look.

Far and away the best hip reducer is the exercise in which the leg is brought to a right angle at the hip, particularly in a backward kick. In this position tone is given to the gluteus muscle, that fleshy mass forming the buttocks. Kick backward, raising the legs as nearly as possible to a 45 degree angle, and swinging the hips.

Most of us work with our arms but we are rerely required to hold the arms at shoulder level—the position which brings into play the triceps, located on the back of the upper arm. Be sure that as you do your arm circling and thrusting exercises you raise your arms to shoulder level.

Night and Day Traveling Essentials

For girls bitten with wanderlust, travel-wise young Frances Farmer indorses glamour by night and strict tailoring by day. She is sketched, above, in her own two traveling stand-bys—uncrushable jersey and net for romantic evenings and a simple tailleur for daytime

Wears Long Bob; Carries Few Cosmetics

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

WOMEN who have longed for glamour while living out of a lone suitcase will be able to borrow a pointer or two from blond Frances Farmer, a globe-girdling screen star appearing here this week in "Golden Boy." The views on traveling lightly and sensibly of this 25-year-old actress are almost as monastically simple as is her lack of theatrical make up and frankness of speech in her prviate life.

Being a practical person, for all her beauty of face and figure, Miss Farmer votes strongly against high hair-dos while traveling. If you plan a holiday trip by air, sea or land, take her seasoned advice and wear your hair as neatly as possible. Having arrived in Washington by way of Chicago, by way of New York, by way of California, by way of Europe and Seattle, she has had the time and the place to reduce traveling essentials down to their common denominators.

Decries Overdressing

Aside from her opinions that "nothing looks more despondent than a once charmingly styled high hair-do going to seed because of hard road work," Miss Farmer feels that make-up, too, should play only a minor part in one's traveling.

"The parts I essay on stage and screen," she said, "give me ample opportunity to be what I'm really not. Consequently, away from the theater, I use as few cosmetics as possible. For long trips, a deep pore cleansing cream is all I rely on. It acts as astringent, powder base and rejuvenator and is medically invigorating. A vivid lipstick of good quality completes my cosmetic retinue." Shampooing and brushing are Miss Farmer's only other beauty traveling companions. To these her glossy clean Hollywood bob is convincing testimonial.

Extreme caution should be exercised against lugging around too many daytime dresses and accessories, according to the trimly tailored Miss Farmer. "Suits are the only real solution to the smart wardrobe traveler," she insists. She herself rotates from one to another of her beautifully cut tailleurs, which she wears on and off pullmans as though they were uniforms.

Lauds Tailleurs

"I happen to have had one or two custom tailleurs made for every day wear," she said, "but just because these are of first rate quality, I don't maintain that price has anything to do with appropriateness of dress. I personally love to go into a shop, unknown, and snoop about for a good cheap blouse or sweater. I'm afraid of clothes with too big a price tag. You have to live up to them."

This conservative angle on basic clothes buying, from a girl who earns a bigger salary than many a best dressed woman, should be balm to many a sensitive soul, sceptical of traveling because of nothing to wear. Miss Farmer further offers comfort to the nomad on a budget, for she advises as few evening clothes as possible for traveling. She herself carries but one formal gown with her, a dress to weather all climates and any amount of packing. Her wise choice is a black silk jersey, draped about the bust and billowing out in swishy folds of net about the skirt.

Miss Farmer urges the reverse of the trim neat look for a happy traveler's night life.

"Soft pretty clothes give new sparkle and glamour to the slightly sooty voyager during the evening hours," she said. Her most characteristic gesture of independence as both train traveler and actress is in her elaborate disregard for silk hose. She wears only rayon or lisle hosiery, American made, as her personal boycott against certain economic policies. Incidentally, she maintains they are perfect traveling companions as they don't run or snag as easilly as sheer chiffon stockings.

The Gentler Sex

This Modern World

"Who is that woman over there . . . in the silver fox jacket . . . talking to Ted Niblick?"

"That's that Mrs. Carbon . . . the one who's having that affair with Tom Vasher."

"Oh, is THAT the one? What'd he do about Edith Mink?"

"Oh, she's going to marry old Judge Puffer . . . as soon as she gets her divorce."

"Well, what's George Mink going to do? Marry that secretary?"

"No, they say he's going back to his second wife."

"You mean Grace?"

"Well, I guess so—she was his second, wasn't she? Well, anyway she's the one he's going back to."

"Grace was his first wife. He was her second husband."

"I didn't know Grace had been married before."

"Yes, you know she married my brother—"

"Oh, I'd forgotten all about Charlie. It's so hard to keep track—"

"I know. Well, the thing that puzzles me is why Mabel Vasher doesn't give Tom a divorce."

"Well, I suppose maybe she would if he'd really settle down long enough on any certain one . . . Say, I heard the Boyd Beetles were having trouble again."

"Who's he got on the string now?"

"They say it's that Mrs. Emery Pash."

"No!"

Yes. Say, was she the first wife of Col. Titter or Senator Budge. I was trying to remember the other day—

"She was the wife of Col. Titter."

"Are you sure?"

"Well, I guess I know who my own sister married—"

"Oh, that's right! I forgot. She's married so often—what I mean is you sort of lose track—"

"I know. I guess you knew Col. Titter was marrying Marcia Moone."

"No! Marcia Moone? . . . Oh, yes, she was the first wife of Horace Burlap, wasn't she?

"No, she was Horace's second wife."

"I believe you're wrong about that. I'm sure she was Horace's first wife. Now SHE was the one who had been married before . . . don't you know, to Rufe Tartar?"

"No, you're all mixed up. The present Mrs. Rufe Tartar was Horace's third wife."

"Well, I'm willing to bet anything Marcia was Horace's first wife. You see, she was married the first time to my step-mother's cousin—"

"I don't care. I know what I'm talking about. Marcia simply couldn't have been Horace's first wife."

"I don't see why—"

"Well, for one thing—I was his first wife!"

"Oh—of course! I'd forgotten. You know it's so hard to keep track . . ."

Love-Starved Wife's Problem Brings Conflicting Comment From Readers; Spiritual Angle Discussed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Bewildered" and your answer (of November 30) interested me, because I think there are some things which may be said in defense of the husband—and I am a woman. It is not generally known that there is a relatively large group of individuals who believe the function of a husband and wife has a higher meaning than the purely physical relation; and who believe, also, that the emphasis apparently being placed by the majority on the necessity of physical expression of love is decidedly overdone.

This group recognizes the fact that the privilege of husband and wife to create offspring, when mutually desired, is a sacred privilege; and that it should be treated as such and that its function should be reserved for this purpose and this alone; and that any surplus energy of a creative nature should not be wasted in so-called amorous pleasures but should be transmuted into the creation of other things, according to the interests and abilities of the individuals.

We believe there is a mental and spiritual intercourse between husbands and wives capable of yielding far greater satisfaction and enjoyment than those of the physical levels. We know of many couples who have found this to be true . . . The above-mentioned group believes that habits grow by repetition, mental as well as physical; and that certain ideas have been so ground into the warp-and-woof of the social mind that they have been accepted as true. Only gradually are some of these being dragged out into the light and seen in their true perspective . . .

Most doctors take the view which is current and share the consensus of opinion of the non-medical majority; but there are doctors and many laymen who do take another view of the matter—a view not so frequently publicized . . . The type of doctor I refer to sees all functions as natural and as being beneficial to their possessors when used for their natural purpose and not otherwise.

Since "Bewildered" still has some love left for her husband, would it not be well to give some consideration to the other side of the picture before walking out of the situation? Would it not be well for her to come at him from a different angle; to become intensely interested in some of the things he is interested in; to try to work with him in creating something—a garden, the decoration of a room, the writing of a book, compiling a collection—or raising some kind of pets . . .

Sometimes the woman has to be the aggressor in matters of affection, especially after marriage; if her husband is not so affectionate, let her be the one to express it more frequently and he will probably be appreciative and respond to an occasional caress. Some women have almost masculine qualities and some men have quite feminine characteristics. If we wait for perfection to come along we are bound for a long wait. We must love people "as they are," with all their faults; appreciate their good qualities and let the rest go. They may be able to change themselves a little, but one person seldom changes another except by good example, and the latter will keep anybody busy. Maybe this isn't relevant to the subject but I thought I'd have to butt in and have my say. Sincerely, ANONYMOUS.

Anohter Wife's Story

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Bewildered's" letter of November 30 relates my own married life so exactly that I might as well have written it. I know what a hard problem she has to solve and I hope with all my heart that she finds the solution I have never found. For five years my husband and I have lived as brother and sister. After a year's misunderstanding and unhappiness, my husband finally consented to consult a physician. In fact, he consulted two or three, and finally one—the only one in whom he had any confidence—bluntly told him that it was "a mental attitude."

Now, my husband seems to be content with this abnormal life. He has more or less the feeling that it is God's will. I cannot feel that way. God is blamed too much for things that men are too indifferent or too lazy to remedy. I feel that my husband should discuss this matter with an authority who knows the reasons for human behavior. But there is nothing more that I can say, since any attempt to discuss the matter only makes him antagonistic and moody . . .

I love my husband and my religion forbids divorce. So I have sunk into a dull despair. I have tried to adjust myself to this way of living and outwardly have done so. Yet within, I am bitterly unhappy. Spiritually and physically I have lost much. But life does not last forever. SARAH.

Our Accuracy Questioned

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your usually interesting and factually accurate column was marred on November 30 by your statement that, "As you may or may not know, almost any divorce court in the land would recognize such a grievance as this (referring to denial of marital intercourse) as just ground for divorce."

While it is true that some courts do recognize such refusal as grounds for divorce in itself, the weight of authority is otherwise. The statement as you made it is likely to be misunderstood. It would be well to consult with a competent lawyer before making any statements about legal questions. P. S.: Certainly no divorce would be granted on such grounds in the District. Yours very truly, J. K.

Opinion of Authority

DEAR J. K.: I am entirely in sympathy with your opinion that "it would be well to consult with a competent lawyer before making any statements about legal questions." As a rule, that is exactly what I do—contact the best-informed authority, insofar as is possible, in any special field, before borrowing findings from that field. In this instance, I have the assurance of an attorney who specializes in divorce procedure, that the grievance aforementioned constitutes ground for legal separation, absolute divorce and, sometimes, annulment—not only in the District of Columbia, but generally throughout the land.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN. Have you been through the toy departments yet? I am constantly amazed at the practical tone of all the things this year. One of our big stores has practically guaranteed success, especially among the little boys, by calling its kid show "Radio Television Land." Lawse me. Some change from the not-distant days when all the stores needed was an overstuffed Santa, a red sled and a few prop reindeer. No more. Children are much too smart these days.

Who should come churning in on the Normandie the other day, with little fanfare, but Marlene "Legs" Dietrich herself, back after six months to do a film in Hollywood and to take out her final citizenship papers, an event due next March. Marlene says her daughter, Maria, now 13, is especially "crazy" to be an American citizen.

During the automobile show here that mighty motor man, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., won the cocktail party honors for the year, licking Hollywood to death. He tossed a shindy in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf, at which there were over 1,000 guests, and he shook hands with most of 'em, too. Mrs. Sloan just sat in a box draped with silver fox, while papa did the heavy work. That's just how it should be.

The movie didn't seem to hurt the original dramatic version a bit, for that comedy wallop, "You Can't Take It With You," is now well on its way to 900 performances on Broadway.

A local society writer makes much of the fact that the Countess Folke Bernadotte, who used to be Estelle Manville, speaks perfect Swedish. Well, my good gosh, if any of us married into a foreign royal family, wouldn't our first job be to pick up the lingo to perfection? Then we'd teach the in-laws to go for ham and eggs, of course.

Helen Misch Kemp has moved the Golden State right into our town by opening the California Shop on a swanky block of Madison avenue . . . Mrs. Kemp says every bit of merchandise is from out thar. She sells preserves, fruits, hand-blocked linens, some tropical modern furniture, and all sorts of small gifts. Local girls on the prowl have failed to find any trace of Tyrone Power on the counters, and they go away pouting. But who wants that flutter-minded type?

Gay Reception at Legation Celebrates 20th Anniversary of Yugoslavia's Union

Official and Residential Notables at Party
Mourning Reduces Diplomatic Attendance
Frances Farmer at Spanish Embassy Gathering

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

OFFICIAL AND RESIDENTIAL Washington, recently turning most of its attention to the debutantes and the younger set generally, took a deep breath yesterday and for a change stepped out to the big reception celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Union of Yugoslavia.

With the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch greeting their long line of guests in the drawing room; with a flock of social and diplomatic celebrities congregating in the hall and the dining room; and with the Czecho-Slovak Minister, Vladimir Hurban, attending his first big party since his recovery, the event was of red letter proportions on a number of accounts.

Since several embassies and legations are observing periods of mourning, however, the diplomatic accent was not so heavy as usual, and there were more guests from official and residential circles than one usually sees at foreign anniversary celebrations. Huge vases of yellow chrysanthemums decorated the second-floor rooms of the legation, where guests gathered and lingered and watched the top of the stirway to see later arrivals. Receiving with the Minister, Mme. Fotich wore a frock of pencil blue crepe, fashioned with a full, floor-length skirt and a v-neckline. A strand of pearls and an orchid corsage completed her costume.

The long table in the dining room was centered with a bouquet of small white chrysanthemums, in which big bows of red and blue ribbon were entwined on either side. Guests clustering around the table had a chance sooner or later to see everybody else at the party, including small Pola Fotich, daughter of the host and hostess.

Whether many in the company knew exactly why the celebration was taking place and that it actually marked the anniversary of the Slovenes' and Croats' union with Serbia as the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes was a matter of speculation to a small group of guests that tied itself into a conversational knot around the Yugoslav Counselor, Dr. Vladimir Rybar.

Many Notables Seen in Throng

Meanwhile, in the hall, near the table where champagne was served, the Czecho-Slovakia Minister and Mme. Hurban were having a little reception all their own, with just about everybody crowding around to greet them. A few steps away was the German Charge d'Affaires, Dr. Hans Thomsen, in the midst of another sizable circle; while the personable Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki was surrounded, as usual, from the second he arrived until he departed a few minutes later.

Usually, at larger diplomatic receptions, the big-wigs come early, make the rounds, and then depart as soon as possible. Among those seen during the first half of yesterday's party were the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts; the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, and Mrs. Leahy, who arrived with the latter's sister, Mrs. Albert Niblack; the former Argentine Ambassador and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, about the most popular couple there.

Glimpsed chatting with Mrs. Bliss were Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, the latter trimly turned out in a black ensemble, brightened by a bouquet of pink roses on her shoulder. Lothrop Stoddard was seen nearby; also, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller; Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wearing one of the snappiest black ensembles I have seen this season—a tailored caracul coat over a black frock with a pearl ornament at the throat and a snatch of a black hat perched jauntily over one eye.

The Misses Anne and Mary Randolph were there; also the Misses Ida and Pauleita Guffey and the Misses Mary and Josephine Patten. Senator Theodore Green was moving merrily through the throng, as was Senator William H. King. Still others seen were Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell and her daughter, Miss Dorothy Tirrell; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, who left last evening on the Congressional Special for Florida.

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Marc Peter were there; also, the Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri; the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnfelt; Mrs. George Thorpe, chatting with Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose; Mrs. Herbert Feis climbing the stairway on arrival just as Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre was coming down to leave; Mrs. Emil Hurja; the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke; Edward Weintal, Capt. Allan J. Chantry arriving with his daughter, Miss Carolyn Chantry; Mircea Victor Babes, Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, who was there without Mme. Babes, she being laid low with a cold; Mme. Folke Wennerberg, of the Swedish Legation; the Counselor of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Feer, and several hundred others.

Frances Farmer At Spanish Embassy

Earlier in the afternoon a much smaller gathering at the Spanish Embassy was an event at which Miss Frances Farmer, star of stage and screen, who is currently appearing in "Golden Boy," was the center of attention. She and several other members of the cast of "Golden Boy" were tea guests of the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios at 4:30 o'clock.

Arriving on the dot, the pretty blonde actress came to present the Ambassador and Senora de los Rios with a contribution of food, clothing, and toys, thereby opening the campaign sponsored by the Central Spanish Relief Committee for Christmas gifts that will go to the suffering children of Spain. After the presentation, Miss Farmer and others in her party settled down in a nest of chairs arranged around a tea table in the patio to enjoy an especially pleasant party. Senora de los Rios, wearing a burgundy frock, presided at the table. The Ambassador moved from one to another of the small group assembled, hosting in his usual gracious fashion; while the Counselor of the Embassy and Senora de Lecuona, the latter especially lovely in a brown ensemble, assisted.

Among those in the group were a few members of the Spanish Relief Committee, including Mrs. Gardner Jackson, Mrs. Charles Putnam, Mrs. Clark Warburton and Senorita Isabel Garcia Lorca, niece of Senora de los Rios.

In a brief chat with Miss Farmer who incidentally is as natural as your next-door neighbor, I learned that she is looking forward to a nice long rest when "Golden Boy" closes next week in Pittsburgh, and that she won't be back in Hollywood for work until next June. Also, that she enjoys the stage more than the screen, and hopes to be Broadway bound again as soon after her vacation as possible.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

TWO UNFAILING SIGNS of a Washington deb party—especially if it is held at the 1925 F Street Club—are the presence of masses of chrysanthemums and Mrs. Wallach Merriam. Yesterday both were in evidence at the very successful tea dance which Commander and Mrs. John Magruder gave for their debutante daughter, Agnes. The hosts received in a setting of these flowers, which were also scattered in vases here and there throughout the club, and Mrs. Merriam, who "brings out" so many debs, sat surrounded by friends to watch the dancing.

The party had all the festive air of a wedding. The proud father was beaming like a bridegroom, and two tiny little girls, in long hooped skirts, and carrying nosegays, practically stole the show. They were Esther, the young Magruder daughter, and a friend of hers, Lisette Littlehales, and they sat against the wall clutching their flowers and solemnly regarding the dancers until rescued by Commander Magruder, who twirled them about the floor.

THE PRETTY, dark-eyed deb wore one of the loveliest dresses seen so far this season—a frock of starched blue chiffon, full skirted over a silver lame slip. It was made with a wide silver girdle and tiny puffed sleeves, and she carried a bouquet of red and white roses which had been sent all the way from Philadelphia by a friend.

The older people congregated in the living room and bar, while Miss Magruder's friends and their escorts danced merrily on the enclosed porch to Sidney's orchestra.

PARTY IMPRESSIONS: Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, in black, with a long veil on her hat; Elsie Ekengren struggling to arrange her trailing veil so she could smoke; Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, the latter wearing the smartest outfit there—a gray suit trimmed with beaver, a hat with touches of pale green, and a corsage of orchids; their daughter, Alice, who, with Sylvia Alexander, Maisie Howard and Patricia Griffin, assisted during the afternoon; Maisie, in a long, flame-colored frock, dancing with Lieut. Richard Hunt; William Macomb waltzing about with Laura Tuckerman.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, accompanied by Mr. Shouse; Mrs. William T. Mann, chatting with Dorsey Fisher and James Penfield, of the State Department; Mrs. Hiram Bingham with her daughter, Elise Hill, who wore a lovely silver lame dress with a tiny hat made of purple ostrich plumes.

Others were Miss Anne Perin; Baron von Glenanth, recently returned from a stay of several months in Germany; Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson and her debutante daughter, Ann; Mrs. George T. Summerlin, Jr., with silver foxes and a veil; Miss Anne Squire; the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Pierre de Benech; the Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg; Miss Florence Harris, very chic; Comdr. and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, with their charming young daughter, Anne, who will come out in a few years; Mrs. Austin Kautz, Mrs. J. P. Conover, and many others. The debutante was later feted by her parents at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Club.

Comdr. Magruder leaves next month to take command of the Augusta, in China, and his family expects to join him there later in the winter.

VISITOR DEPARTMENT: Jean Paul-Boncour, a nephew of the French statesman, and attached to the embassy here a number of years ago, is arriving shortly for a two-day stay. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips will have as weekend guests Mr. and Mrs. George Soule, of New York. Mr. Soule, who is head editor of the New Republic, will speak at the Town Hall on Sunday evening . . . The Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen have with them Princess Vera, a daughter of the late Grand Duke Constantia Constantine of Russia and a cousin of Princess Kyra, who married Prince Louis Ferdinand, the Kaiser's grandson. They paid Washington a visit last spring.

PRINCESS VERA is in deep mourning for her brother, the late Prince George, of Russia, so her stay here will not be marked by any parties. A very pretty person, in her late twenties, she is an excellent sailor and studied at a school for navigation. Her home is in Germany.

Mrs. Sibley Discusses Influence of Christ

Speaks to Twentieth Century Club
Says Jesus Founded Democratic Ideals
Urges 'Dictatorship of God'

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

People have forgotten that the foundations of the great democracies are built on the principles of Christ. Mrs. Harper Sibley told members of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday. Unless we can recapture the principle of justice and brotherly love, it will make little difference which party is in power. Mrs. Sigley, widely known as a church worker and lecturer, came from her home in Rochester, N. Y., to address the club at its monthly meeting, at the Y. W. C. A.

Taking as her subject "What the Birth of Christ Has Meant to the World and Why," she traced events in past history and present which illustrated the contrast between Government which was the outgrowth of Christian precepts and that based on human desire for power and conquest.

"Until we return to the principles of justice and brotherly love," she said, "we shall have human dictators instead of dictatorship of God wherein the value and ability of the individual rather than of the state or nation is fo first importance. This is not to be found in any other religion of ideology," she declared.

Mrs. Sibley, a former resident of the Capital, whose return to Washington is always welcomed by her many friends was introduced by Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, president of the club. Mrs. Sibley wore a becoming black velvet frock, trimmed in silver and a small black velvet hat.

The program, devoted to subjects pertaining to the Christmas season, also included a talk by Donald T. Sheehan, of the D. C. Tuberculosis Association, who told of the Christmas seal campaign. In addition, there was 15 minutes of music by the Orpheus Quartet under the direction of Prof. Otto Torney Simon.

New members taken into the club yesterday were Mrs. James Cunningham Rodgers, Mrs. Clarence Price, Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay and Mrs. Earl W. McComas.

The business meeting included the appointment of a committee, headed by Mrs. Sidney Thompson, to prepare for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the club to which it is looking forward in another year.

The French section will have its meeting tomorrow at the Y. W. C. A. with Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller, jr, as speaker.

Colonial Dames Present Flag

The Colonial Dames of America presented the flag of their societ yesterday to the National Cathedral to be hung in the great choir with those of other national organizations. Mrs. William Warner Hoppin, of New York, president general, made the presentation to Dean Noble C. Powell in a dedication ceremony held at the evensong service.

The officers of the organization formed a procession outside of the Cathedral and marched in, with Mrs. Gordon Herndon Phillips, as color bearer, leading. Mrs. Atherton Macondray, of Seminary Hill, Alexandria, accompanying her as color escort. Bedtime Story

The Great Dread

Though of the future we know naught,
The thought of it with dread is fraught.
—Young Gander.

Of course this isn't always true but it is sometimes, perhaps oftener than it should be. As a rule the people in fur and feathers live altogether in the present, content to let the future take care of itself. A few of the thrifty ones, like the Squirrel family and the Beavers, do look ahead, for they store food for the hard days to come. The loss of those food supplies would worry them. But most of the people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest just live from day to day.

The young gander on the pond of Paddy the Beaver, unable to fly and left behind by his family on their Southern flight, was lonesome and afraid. Somehow fear seems to go with lonesomeness. Just what enemies he might have he didn't know for he was too young to have had experience. That there were enemies lurking around the pond he was sure. So fear kept him always watchful when close to shore. To many of the wild folk, fear is in truth, a blessing. It is in reality a life-preserver That sounds queer, doesn't it? It is true. Fear keeps them alert and watchful and so saves their lives.

But now a new kind of fear was upon the young gander, the kind of fear called dread. He didn't understand it. He just felt it. And the cause of it was Jack Frost. Every night Jack Frost visited that pond and every morning when the young gander awoke he found the ice had crept farther out over the surface of the pond. At first this didn't bother him. The ice was only just around the edge and very thin. It melted during the day. Then it didn't melt and it became thicker. The space of open water grew smaller. It was then that dread took possession of him. He didn't know it was dread. To him it was a nameless fear that made him uneasy. What would he do if all the pond was frozen over? What could he do?

Others were watching that ice and with them there was no dread. There was no fear of any kind. Said Paddy the Beaver to Mrs. Paddy, "I guess our work is about over for this season."

"I'm glad of it," declared Mrs. Paddy. "Jack Frost is late this year, so we have had a long season in which to work."

"And so we have one of the biggest and best food piles we ever have had," declared Paddy.

"So now we can quit and rest without worrying," said Mrs. Paddy.

"See how the mud with which we plastered the roof has hardened," said Paddy. "Jack Frost does us a good turn when he makes that solid. I don't care now how soon the pond freezes over or how thick the ice becomes. We've nothing to do now but eat, sleep and keep the dam in order."

"What do you suppose will happen to the young gander when the pond freezes over wholly?" asked Mrs. Paddy looking over to the young son of Honker the Goose as he swam uneasily back and forth in the open water.

Paddy shook his head. "I'm glad I'm not in his place," said he.

Others were taking note of the increasing ice. "If Jack Frost keeps up his good work we may get that dinner yet," said Reddy Fox to Mrs. Reddy.

Mrs. Reddy nodded. "It is clear that that fellow can't fly or he would have left before this," said she. "If he can't fly he will have to come ashore or be frozen in the ice when the pond is wholly covered, and I don't much care which, so long as we are on hand when it happens."

Old Man Coyote was thinking the same thing, and so was Yowler the Bob Cat. So you see the young gander had real excuse for that feeling of dread. It really did look as if he had but a short time to live. And it was all because he had been wounded by a terrible gun. It was beginning to look as if it would have been far better for him had he been killed, as were two of his companions. It is not the ones killed which suffer. It is the wounded ones which must endure pain, hunger and fear.

Masons Open Cornerstone Laid in 1826

On District Building Site For Unbuilt Edifice Famous Names in It

More than a century ago, a group of Masons laid a cornerstone for the third Masonic Hall in Washington.

Yesterday another group of Masons stood by while the stone was taken up at John Marshall place and Indiana avenue northwest, and opened by officials of the order. It had lain since 1826 where the new District Building is to be built.

Needham C. Turnage, United States Commissioner and senior grand warden of the Masonic Order, and Robert B. Bennett, senior deacon of Pentalthia Lodge 23, unearthed the cornerstone. In 112 years the stone apparently had not been touch, though at present houses around it are being torn down to make way for the District Building.

Among those present at the opening of the corner stone were J. Claude Keiper, lodge grand secretary, and Stanford E. Abel, president of the Hechinger Co., which is tearing down the buildings.

In the stone was a lead box containing a map of early Washington, coins and a description of the corner stone laying ceremony and a silver plate engraved by Robert C. Lanphier. This was inscribed with names of the committee appointed to supervise the building of the hall, among them John Quincy Adams, President of the United States; John C. Calhoun, Vice President, and Roger C. Weightman, Mayor of Washington.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—A verdict is expected tomorrow in the United States district court in the $100,000 suit of William Harwood Whitehead, 20-year-old Petersburg youth and former student at the College of William and Mary, against William E. Lott, 26, of Tarentum, Pa., and Detroit, for injuries in an automobile accident at Williamsburg April 18.

Testimony was completed today and most of the afternoon was spent in arguments before Judge Luther B. Way on questions involving instructions to be given the jury tomorrow.

Frank Brooke's Rites Tomorrow

Requiem mass will follow in Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Born in Prince Georges County, Mr. Brooke served in the Army for several years, enlisting in 1883. He was in the Fedeal service for 13 years until his retirement in 1930.

Active in church circles, Mr. Brooke was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Martin's Catholic Church. He leaves his wife, Cora Lee Brooke, and a son, Ray Brooke.

Freezing Temperature Forecast for District

More slippery sidewalks and streets can be expected this morning if an early prediction by the Weather Bureau proves accurate. A low of about 30 degrees was forecast before morning.

During the day the temperature is expected to rise well above the freezing point, probably followed by rain at night.

Tour of Alley Dwellings

The housing committee of the department of government and economic welfare, District League of Women Voters, will conduct a tour of alley dwellings in the District, starting at 2:30 p. m. today from 1719 H street northwest. James Ring, of the Alley Dwelling Authority, will direct.

Mrs. Reed to Speak

Mrs. Ferdinanda Reed, lecturer and traveler, will address the Civic National Forum at the Good Will Baptist Church, Sixteenth and U streets northwest, at 3:30 p. m. Sunday. The meeting, which is open to the public, will be presided over by the Rev. James L. Pim, pastor of the church.

Mrs. Lockwood Sues

Mrs. Marguerite S. Lockwood, of Washington, has filed suit in the circuit court at Rockville for a limited divorce from Schee Merritt Lockwood, of Washington, charging desertion. She is represented by Attorney Joseph A. Cantrel, of Washington.

Kibitzers Don't Bother Poor As He Paints Wildlife Fresco

Kibitzers are plentiful but Henry arnum Poor isn't bothered, although he undoubtedly has one of the most exacting jobs in Washington today.

Poor is painting an ambitious mural entitled "Conservation of American Wild Life" in the new Interior Department Building. It is a true fresco, which means the artist does his painting in wet plaster. It is the style of Michelangelo, Giotto and other masters.

After nine days at his task, during which he has had to be nice to inquisitive clerks, charwomen and tourists, Poor was still rational and enthusiastic, saying:

"Oh, no, people are no bother at all."

The mural is being painted on the wall at the north end of the third floor. What makes the artist especially susceptible to kibitzers is the fact that the fresco rises from the floor. Hence passersby often brush against him as he works.

No matter how great the distraction, Poor must never tarry because he always has a deadline staring him in the face. Each morning his daughter, Anne, comes down and lays the plaster for the day's quota. The plaster must be painted in less than eight hours, while it is still damp.

Fresco painting, developed to perfection by the Renaissance Italians, is still uncommon in this country because, while material requirements are simple, the execuuon is so exacting. Poor believes, however, that it is gradually coming into its own.

He enjoyed comparative privacy while painting frescoes at the Department of Justice a few years ago. One reason was that he worked several feet above the floor, a psycological deterrent to wouldbe inquisitors; and, secondly, the job was just painted outside the Attorney General's office, at which folks linger briefly, if at all.

A former track star at Leland Stanford University and an ardent outdoorsman, Poor obviously is having a good time painting grizzly bear, mallard ducks, elk, chipmunks, flamingoes, Badgers, trumpeter swans, gulls, Canada geese, raccoons and pelicans.

Tthoreau, the philosopher; Audubon, the ornithologist, and Boone, the frontiersman, are the only human beings in the fresco. Thoreau, sitting in medication at the base of a yellow pine tree, is already finished. The other two will appear later.

Gabby Signs for Another Year

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Leo "Gabby" Hartnett, who took over the Chicago Cubs in July of last season and led them to the National League championship, yesterday signed a contract as manager of the club for another year. He also will continue as a player. Here he is signing the contract as Charles "Boots" Weber, Cub president, looks on

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Garden City, Long Island, Dec. 1.—The burnt child is still showing a fine disregard for the fire, your agent gathers from his reconnoitering among the football men of New York. The badly signed individual in this case is Mr. Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants, who invented and is still playing around with a five-man line.

POVICH.

Coach Owen still bears the marks of last December's conflagration, when the Redskins turned on the heat and swept Mr. Owen's five-man line and the rest of his Giants into a 49-to-14 defeat. But a year later, this week, to be exact, what do we find? We find Mr. Owen still very much committed to the five-man line.

Necessity was the mother of Owen's invention of the five-man line—the necessity of stopping Sammy Baugh's passes. By pulling one extra man, sometimes two, into his secondary defense, he had hoped to cover every potential Redskin's receiver and thwart the therat of Slinging' Sammy. That was his strategy in 1937, and plainly it didn't work.

Didn't Stop Cliff

Not only did the Giants five-man line fail to hamper seriously the Redskins' passing game, but it left the Giants woefully vulnerable to the ball-carrying raids of Mr. Cliff Battles, who asks no more than to be turned loose among the enemy's secondary defense with only five men on the Giants' line. Battles, needless to say, was across the scrimmage line and in the Giants' secondary throughout the afternoon, tearing off two 80-yard gallops, and one of a mere 70 yards.

Well, here it is 1938 and the Giants meeting the Redskins again and Mr. Owen still working with might and main to make his five-man line work. It seems he is unconvinced. In fact, he is showing a new fondness for the five-man line since the Giants' game with the Green Bay Packers two weeks ago.

The Giants licked the Packers then, 15 to 3, if you remember, and Owen's club operated with only five men in the first line trenches. They licked the Packers by repulsing Green Bay's famed passing game which is directed by such as Cecil Isbell and Arnie Herber, as talented a pair of chuckers as one team ever moasted.

Faith Is Renewed

Owen theorized that if he could stop the Packers' passing he could lick 'em. They did complete a few over-the-line heaves against the Giants but there were none of those 40 and 50-yard tosses that the Green Bay club has been in the habit of completing to Don Hutson. Owen was not afraid of the Packers' running game. But he was violently opposed to the Green Bay air attack and he credits his five-man line with stopping it, or rather, he credits his six-

Terms Unknown Manager Pleased Will Hold 2 Jobs

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett signed a one-year contract today to continue as manager of the Chicago Cubs for the 1939 season.

Hartnett, a catcher with the Cubs for 17 years, succeeded Charlie Grimm as manager on July 20 and drove the Cubs on to overhaul the New York Giants, and finally Pittsburgh, to win the National League pennant in a dramatic finish that was not decided until a couple of days before the end of the season.

Hartnett will continue as a player in addition to managing the club.

The terms of his salary were not disclosed, but Hartnett was smiling broadly when he emerged from his conference with Phil K. Wrigley, owner fo the team.

Hartnett, as a catcher, received a reported $18,000 a year. Reports were that his salary as manager would be between $22,000 and $25,000.

Gaels Face Undefeated, Untied Foe

Clash at Dallas Game January 2 Officials Pleased 'Wide Open' Battle

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 1.—Twice beaten but dangerous, St. Mary's Galloping Gaels, of California, today accepted an invitation to meet undefeated, untied Texas Tech in the Cotton Bowl post season game on January 2.

Dan Rogers, chairman of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association, said Coach Slip Madigan of St. Mary's had telephoned approval after conferring with athletic officials of the coast school.

Selection of St. Mary's ended a three-day combing of the Nation's outstanding major clubs available for a post season engagement. Reports said four teams were under consideration after considerable shuffling of countless telegrams and telephone calls.

Officials Pleased

Both teams employ wide-open offenses and Cotton Bowl officials expressed satisfaction at the line-up.

The Gaels, one of the major clubs of the Nation, snapped Santa Clara's two-year winning streak in its last engagement, bringing in a 7-to-0 victory that blasted the Broncs out of Rose Bowl consideration.

California, runner-up for Pacific Coast honors and outvoted for the Rose Bowl, edged past St. Mary's, 12-7, in the Gaels' opening game of the season. In its next to last appearance, the Gaels went East and dropped a 3-0 decision to Fordham.

Victims of the St. Mary's list include Gonzaga, 20-0; Loyola, of Los Angeles, 7-0; Portland University, 32-0; University of San Francisco, 13-6 and Santa Clara 7-0.

Bo Williams business manager of athletics at Tech came to Dallas today to pick up 12000 tickets for Lubbock—homesite of the Raiders—alone.

"Why I took 700 reservations over the telephone in my office yesterday" beamed Williams. "And I've only got one 'phone.'

Army Schedules 9 Games; Centre Only Newcomer

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 1 (AP).—Army's football team will play nine games next fall, according to the schedule released today by Lieut. Col. Louis E. Hibbs, graduate manager of athletics.

Columbia, Notre Dame, Harvard and Navy again appear on the schedule, as does Yale, after a one-year interlude; Furman, last played in 1932; Ursinus, last played in 1931, and Penn State, which has not tackled the Cadets since 1900.

The schedule:

September 30, Furman; October 7, Centre; 14, Columbia at New York; 21, Yale at New Haven; 28, Ursinus; November 4, Notre Dame at New York; 11, Harvard at Cambridge, and December 2, Navy at Philadelphia.

Mrs. Lacey Is Elected Golf Head

Succeeds Mrs. Payne Vote Is Unanimous Whole Slate Is In Rules Are Revised

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The nominating committee's choices for officers of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, headed by Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, Columbia, as president, were swept into office by a unanimous vote in the 17th annual meeting yesterday at Columbia Country Club. The event was attended by 120 mmebers of the Association.

Mrs. Lacey, this year's tournament chairman, succeeds Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Congressional, who concluded three years of fine work by presiding over yesterday's affair.

Other new officers, on the slate with the new president, are Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, Manor, first vice-president, succeeding Mrs. Roy Miller, Kenwood, Mrs. George C. Roney, Washington, 2d vice-president, succeeding Mrs. J. W. Belker, Chevy Chase, Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring, secretary, succeeding Mrs. T. J. Johnson, Army and Navy, and Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Woodmont, who will continue as treasurer.

Mrs. Payne was presented with a gift from the retiring officers, by Mrs. Miller, that concluded the business meeting, after which Mrs. Lacey made a short speech of acceptance of her new position, and the luncheon-meting was concluded.

Two changes in the method of team match play were recommended by Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, Beaver Dam, who concluded three years of untiring work as team chairman, one of the most difficult posts of the various committees. The other, an intercity recommendation, was made by Miss Susan Hacker, Chevy Chase.

Various reports on 1938 business were heard preceding the election, including the minutes of last year's affair by Mrs. Johnson, the report of the tournament committee by Mrs. Lacey, the treasurer's report by Mrs. Peyser, and team reports

Flaherty to Start Baugh, Smith, Farkas And Justice Sunday

'Varsity' Backs Get Starting Call in N. Y. Coach to 'Shoot Works' Against Giants Redskins Are at Peak for Title Battle

By Shirlev Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Here in the snowy wastes of suburban New York, a serious young man who answers to the name of Ray Flaherty is devising ways and means to flip a figurative bombshell onto the Gotham football scene.

With his Washington Redskins scheduled to take the field as the 8-to-5 underdogs against the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds Sunday, Coach Flaherty is plotting a surprise for the betting men. Briefly, he is preparing to shoot the works in a grand effort to land the Redskins in the championship playoff.

At the opening whistle he is planning to wheel into action the Redskins' heavy artillery. Shock troops are no part of Flaherty's strategy. Unless he suffers a last-minute change of heart, the Redskins' coach will put on the field a veteran team that resembles more closely the outfit that galloped to a 49-to-14 victory over the Giants last year than any team that has started for he Redskins this season.

Baugh to Start

That means that Sammy Baugh—Slingin' Sammy—will be in the Washington club's starting line-up for the first time since the opening game of the season, his throwing arm cocked from the first toot of the referee's whistle. Not since he pitched the Redskins to a 23-to-26 victory over Philadelphia in September has Baugh been in the starting line-up.

But Flaherty is in a mood to pull no punches against a Giant team that is undefeated in its last seven league games. Not only will Baugh be firing from the outset, but in the same backfield will be the dangerous Andy Farkas, Flaherty's chief running threat. Rarely have Baugh and Farkas performed together as Baugh and Cliff Battles used to team against the opposition last year, but on Sunday the Redskins do not plan to trifle.

Operating with Baugh and Farkas in the starting backfield will be Field Gen. Riley Smith and Ed Justice, a pair of blocking backs who are among the more talented of Baugh's pass receivers. And in the Redskin line will be a veteran group from end to end, which means that Vic Carroll will be at center, Swede Olssen and Jim Karcher at the guards, Turk Edwards and Jim Barber at the tackles and Wayne Millner and Charley Malone at the ends.

The Redskins today received a foretaste of what may be an ice-encrusted field at the Polo Grounds on Sunday. On the St. Paul's School gridiron, a few blocks from their hotel, the Washington athletes were sentthrough a long drill with snow banked around the field and ice crusting its surface.

Save for a painful leg muscle injury of Tackle Willie Wilkin, the Redskins are at their peak physically for the battle. Baugh, harrassed all season by foot and shoulder injuries, demonstrated last week against Pittsburgh that he is in fettle again and Andy Farkas no longer is favoring his sprained foot.

Tickets Sell Fast

New Yorkers are speculating, and with reason, on the role of Fullback Max Krause in Sunday's game. Krause has seen only ten minutes of action since galloying 60 and 70 yards for touchdowns from scrimmage against the Eagles in September and there is a suspicion here that Flaherty has been conserving him for the game against the Giants. An injury suffered by Krause six wekes ago is fully healed and the Giants know him as the fastest back on the Washington club.

Lured by the prospects of the Giants revenge for the unforgettable 49-14 defeat by the Redskins at the Polo Grounds last September, New Yorkers are clamoring for tickets to the game which are retailing at $3.30, $2.20 and $1.10. In the event of fair weather, a capacity crowde of 58.000 is anticipated.

Giant hadquarters reported today that hundreds of reservations from Washingtonians had been received in addition to the blocks of tickets sent to Washington earlier in the week. The prospect is that at least 12,000 fans will make the trip from the Capital.

While the Redskins wer drilling here, Coach Steve Owen of the Giants herded his squad out of the Armory where they had been drilling for the past two days onto

Ambassador Wilson Yale's Honor Guest

Monticlair, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP).—Hugh Wilson, American ambassador to Germany who recently was recalled to confer with the President, and Stanley Reed, associated justice of the Supreme Court, will be guests of honor at the Yale's eighteenth annual barn party Saturday night.

Justice Reed will receive the Montclair Yale Bowl, presented each year to the Yale man who "has won his 'Y' in life" by outstanding achievement after graduation from college. Yale's football players also will be honored at the party.

Jim Londos Tosses Dean At Arena

Wins in 12½ Mins. Not Sensational Strongbow Victor Percy Also Wins

Jim Londos, the wrestling industry's "international world's champion," retained that title and all its accoutrements last night by easily tossing Man Mountain Dean in 12½ minutes in their feature match at Turner's Arena.

The veteran Londos, who admits to 45 summers and has probably seen a lot more springs, took everything in stride, manipulating the husky bulk of the former Soldier Leavitt with considerable ease.

It wasn't in the books that Londos was to lose and Jimmy didn't. Having only recently "won" the mat diadem, it was unlikely that Londos would relinquish the crown so quickly.

The finish came with Londos' famous airplane spin followed by a body slam and body press.

Walter Percy scored over Joe (Handsome) Pazendak in 17½ minutes to the great delight of the crowd. Percy, who was a little tougher than his Lord Fauntleroy handle indicates, used a "kangaroo hold" to subdue his foe.

Chief Chewacki the overgrown Sioux, who grew too big for his papa's tepee and had to turn to wrestling, won over Jim Wright in 17 minutes. The redskin was just too big for Jim and it took a body press to finish the job on Wright after 17 minutes of so-so action.

A fellow named Hank Matheny and a fellow named Frank Brown tussed and tugged, banged and burped for 30 minutes to what the referee was pleased to call a draw. The customers were calling it something else.

Jules Strongbow, who is also one of America's original inhabitants, won over Herbie Freeman. Herbie was anything but free during the entire 14½ minutes of his semifinal melee with the redskin and came out a bad second. The finishing touch was the old, esteemed body press.

An audience of about 1,200 fans witnessed the exhibitions.

Move Is On To Retain Grid Setup

Officers Back Hank 'Name' Coaches Out Mentor's Statement McKee's Comment

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Dec. 1.—A Navy officer again will pilot the football destinies of the Naval Academy in 1939.

An official source—an executive officer at the academy—declared flatly today that the graduate coaching system would be continued through the next season.

The official, who declined to permit use of his name until the coaching question is settled, added "big name" coaches wouldn't fit in at the academy.

The coaches themselves, he continued, wouldn't consider a berth here because athletic scholarships aren't granted. Coaches with a national reputation, he said, don't want to risk their records without being able to recruit football talent.

Reports Denied

Frequently repeated reports that Lieut. Harry (Hank) Hardwick, present head coach, had informed the Navy Department he wanted to be assigned to sea duty after the 1938 season, were denied officially by the Navy athletic department.

"I have never been informed that Lieut. Hardwick stated he would not return in 1939," said Capt. E. W. McKee, director of athletics.

Late today Lieut. Hardwick issued a statement, which he called his only "official" comment on the situation.

"In answer to the questions put to me," the statement said, "I would only like to say that I am primarily a naval officer. As Navy football coach, I have endeavored to install officer-like qualities in the midshipmen placed under my care. I have not received any orders and cannot say where I am going, if I go."

Hardwick Backed

Several of Hardwick's fellow officers declared there was a well-defined movement under way to insure his presence at the head of the coaching department next year, and asserted this year's team was the first Navy eleven in 12 years to outplay Arm, even in defeat.

It was pointed out that Hardwick will have charge of spring practice at the Academy, regardless of whether he continues or relinquishes his position as head coach. Thus, there is neither hurry nor worry about who'll coach the squad next season.

McKee said he hadn't talked with Hardwick since the Army-Navy game. He added, however, that he believed the decision whether Hardwick returns for a third season as head coach rests largely with Hardwick.

A decision on the coaching setup for 1939, McKee added, wouldn't be reached until the athletic council meets next week, and maybe not even then.

Recognizing mention of Harry Stuhldreher, University of Wisconsin coach, as a possible Navy coach, McKee said he had not discussed the question with Stuhldreher.

McKee added he had met Stuhldreher at the Poughkeepsie Regatta and at a Racquet Club dinner, but said the meetings were "casual and social." He said he met the Wisconsin coach through Rip Miller, former head coach at the acadamy, and a teammate of Stuhldreher at Notre Dame.

Pitt Frosh Gridmen Want A 20-Minute Workday!

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1.—Pitt's freshmen football players, who have scored once in their contest with the university's front office, kicked off again today by laying down a new list of demands for assistance.

Demanding a "showdown" on their status, which revived a controversy over the university's "strictly amateur" policy, they bucked the line to the office of John Weber, university business manager.

Weber emerged from a huddle to announce he would probably have a definite answer Monday to the freshmen's statement which included:

"1. We were told (by a university representative) that we were to work only 15 to 20 minutes per day.

"2. Notes (for tuition) given us at registration were supposed to be a matter of 'formality' when we signed them.

"3. Athletic eligibility applications were also said to be a matter of 'formality.'

"4. Whenever we were given the notes, the eligibility cards or anything else, we were not given time to read them and be able to understand them.

"5. We sincerely believe that we should be interviewed (regarding the points stressed) only as a group, and not individually, as proposed by the administration officials."

A spokesman for the university athletic department said a "group within a group" of the gridders was responsible for the statement and that it was "not a 100 per cent" action.

The athletes are currently paid $48 a month for their work, which consists mainly of cleaning windows and sweeping floors in Pitt's skyscraper cathedral of learning.

The university's board of athletic trustees last week agreed to cancel tuition fees for the current school year if the football players entered college in the belief that they were not expected to pay.

At that time, the board made it plain that the waiver was for this year only and that the athletes would be expected to pay for tuition, "like other students," beginning with the opening of the next school term.

Royal Business Takes Inaugural Feature at Charles Town

At the Post

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Jockey Manny Berg is the proud papa of a new baby boy. The camera crew tried out the set-up on the third position in the first race, although Dilwin took the show money by a good half length. The picture was good.

Jockey Eddie Smith, Washington boy, who now operates on the big time, was a visitor here yesterday and renewed old acquaintances.

Two and two, in the daily double made a whole lot more than four. The pay off was $403.80. If there had been a few more customers o nthe race special out of Washington, it would have been necessary to have run two sections.

Horsemen are still kicking because Bowie made them go to Baltimore for their checks after the Prince Georges County meeting was called off. Don't try to cash Bowie tickets at this track. There's no connection between the two governing bodies. As I printed the other day, tickets from Bowie can be cashed by mailing them to Southern Maryland Agricultural Co., Baltimore Life Insurance Building, Baltimore.

Jockey Noboy Jake made one of his occasional visits to the course, accompanied by his usual line up of sandwiches.

Tiger Same sent a wire to his girl and it was returned with the notation "Unknown at this address."

The windows in the press box have been washed. It wasn't a bad day at all. The temperature was 75 degrees—in front of the open fireplace in the clubhouse. Pork Chops was conspicuous by his absence. He's going to school down in Fredericksburg, Va.

Maurice Oliver is the new "Voice of Charles Town." It keeps him out of the press box. What became of Reds, the fire-eater?

Some idea of the number of horses here is brought out by the fact that 98 entries for today's third race were excluded.

BILL.

First race—Game Chaser has shown high speed on an off track and shapes up best of the juveniles slated to go postward in this abbreviated sprint. Sister Reigh is a fair sort. Lyconna to take care of the others.

Second race—Frederick is a veteran with good speed and a liking for muddy tracks. Seems ideally placed in this field and I see no reason for mistakes. Depinard also favors an off course. Veritas goes well over this track and may be dangerous.

Third race—Miss Epe seems headed for the main brackets in this field. She loves the course and needs only the right ride. Chicanna is better than generally rated. Keyed Up for the show award.

Fourth race—Inactive won on the major tracks and gets in this with only 106 pounds. With good handling I expect this one to score. Man at Arms comes to the races here recommended by good efforts in Maryland. Grumpy went well here last summer.

Fifth race—Surprise Box has a high turn of early speed that may serve him in good stead in this company. Not exactly the class of the field but the others are mostly the come-from-behind type. Tedmelia is tossed in here with feather weight and is likely to be close. French Trap prefers the off going.

Sixth race—Setemup was beaten in a photo finish at Bowie and seems capable of turning back this kind. Match Point has mud track races in the book that point to a good chance here. Channing should give a good account of himself.

Seventh race—Carls Choice ran a good race over at Bowie and seems the best of this cheap field. Famous Clayton favors the track conditions and the long route. Prince Khayyam to take care of the others.

Eighth race—(Substitute)—If this race is used, I'll take Pegadette, Edith Walker and Brooke Herod.

Best bet—Frederick.

Lou Machado Boots $12.40 Shot Home

Beats 7 Sprinters Wins on Muddy Oval Last Chase Places Double Pays $403.80

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 1.—With Royal Business carrying off chief honors, the sport of kings returned to the plant of the Charles Town Jockey Club today. Racing over a track that was hub-deep in thick mud, Royal Business carried the colors of Capt. E. Johnston, Virginia sportsman, to victory over seven other better-than-average sprinters in the Inaugural Purse, outstanding event on the program. With Jockey Lou Machado doing the booting, the daughter of Sun Meadow finished 2½ lengths in advance of Last Chase with Mondoit, half of the Feltner-Gilpin entry, third.

Royal Business paid her backers a $12.40 mutuel and ran the seven furlongs in 1:26 4-5, in keeping with the chocolate-pudding conditions.

A crowd of 5,000 witnessed the program under clear skies and a hard-working sun and they wagered 20 per cent more than on opening day of the last December meeting.

Goes Through Fence

The feature race was marked by a spectacular spill in which both Jockey Leon Garrett and Kai-Min escaped injury. Apparently blinded by the mud being thrown in his face, Kai-Min stumbled and went through the fence in midstretch. Horse and rider rolled down the hill in the infield.

Royal Business was always a forward factor in the struggle. She was close to Last Chase's pace, went to the front along the backstretch and then drew out gradually to win easily. Last Chase was the only horse to give the winner competition. Mondoit, the third horse, was eight lengths away from second money.

Thus Owen's faith in his invention was restored in a great measure and it is a comfort to him to know, also, that on Sunday there will be no Cliff Battles to confuse the Giants with his running. Mr. Battles, as you may have heard, is no longer with the Redskins. He is with Columbia University as a coach, for which the Giants are duly thankful.

However, Mr. Ray Flaherty, who coaches the Redskins, is not unduly concerned with the Giants' five-man line. In fact, it may be be said on the authority of Mr. Flaherty himself that he is very much in favor of the Giants' five-man line. He hopes that the Giants never lose faith in it.

Because Mr. Flaherty holds the five-man line in what might be called utter contempt. It's illogical, unsound and bordering on the stupid, Mr. Flaherty maintains. It has been tried before, and found utterly wanting, the Redskin coach adds, in questioning Mr. Owen's inventive genius.

Pooh! Says Red

Flaherty's complete disrespect for the five-man line is not of recent origin. A year ago, with his Redskins due to meet the Giants, Flaherty registered no alarm, whatsoever about the new Giant defense. Advised of Owen's commitment to the five-man line, Flaherty said, "that's great. If they use it, we'll murder 'em." The Giants used it and the Redskins murdered 'em.

The five-man line that was down the alley for Cliff Battles will be down the alley for Andy Farkas on Sunday, Flaherty believes. "If we can get Farkas across the scrimmage line—and we should—Andy will make 'em suffer plenty!" said Flaherty. "Farkas may not be any Battles, but he's no man to have running around loose in your secondary defense."

Because the five-man line is conducive to running plays, Sammy carried the ball a half dozen times this year, but there is more than an undercurrent of suspicion that he will carry it against the Giants on Sunday.

Despite his failure to figure in the Redskins' running attack this season, Baugh can be a potent package when he tucks the ball under his arm. The lad who came to the Redskins as a forward passer in 1937, was better than a fair ball carrier when he finally earned his Redskin letter. In fact, after Battles, he was the best ball carrier on the Washington team.

He, too, may take a fancy to the five-man line on Sunday.

the field at the Polo Grounds. There amid vanishing traces of the week-end snowstorm, they held a two-hour workout.

Giants Clicking

The Giants rule favorites in deference to their superior record this season which includes a 10-7 victory over the Redskins at Washington. Six victories and a tie have marked the last seven games of Owen's team which, with Tuffy Leemans staging a return to his best form, Ed Danowski leading the league in passing, and Bull Karcis adding punch to the running attack, is now functioning at its best.

The Redskins' morning workout was given over to a battery of New York press cameramen who called all the signals and ran the squad through spectacular, if unsound, plays. But in the afternoon, the Redskins practiced for keeps, topped off by a mile run back to the hotel.

Comparative statistics of the two teams show that the Redskins have registered more first downs and gained more yards than the Giants this season. The Giants have the better percentage in forward passing, recovered fumbles, points after touchdowns and on the defense.

The first thing that greets the Giant players in the clubhouse when the report for work is "49-14" in large letters, a grim reminder of what they must atone for this year.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Marshall Mania

New York, Dec. 1.—The casual visitor in New York probably wouldn't notice anything special in the air unless it was a snowflake or two. Everything seems to be going on about as usual. They're tearing down something here and putting up something there and the curious crowds collect at both places. People hurry and scurry along subway platforms. Taxis skid and slide along Broadway. There's a surging of pedestrians in the Wall Street district around noon, a jam of suburbanites in the railroad stations at dusk, and gay throngs in the night clubs and theaters in the evening.

VIDMER.

Everything seems to be going along as usual. A lot of people don't even seem to be aware of the fact that the New York Giants and the Washington Redskins are going to play in the Polo Grounds on Sunday for the Eastern championship of the National Professional League, and those who do know it and have every intention of going to the game seem to be taking it quite calmly.

But it's different in Washington. The Capital has become a campus. Everybody seems very much aware that the Redskins are going to play the Giants in New York on Sunday, and the old college spirit is running up and down Pennsylvania avenue like a lobbyist looking for an appropriation.

About every third person you meet on F street is humming a tune, and if you listen carefully you might even catch the words:

"Hail to the Redskins, hail to vic-to-ree Braves on the warpath, fight for ol' D. C."

They're playing it at the tea dances. They're playing it at the night spots.

"Scalp 'em, swamp 'em, we will take 'em, big score!
Read 'em, weep' em, touchdown, we want heap more!

Something to Cheer

It's the song of the Redskins, as far as I know it's the only professional football song in existence, which perhaps is just as well. The professionals, as a whole, don't go in for the campus spirit, but Washington is different. It's probably due to the influence of George Preston Marshall.

Mr. Marshall never went to college himself, but somehow there is something very collegiate about him.. In the old days, meaning when he was merely rpince of the Palace Laundry in Washington, Mr. Marshall used to adopt different alma maters to suit the season. Sometimes it would be Georgetown, sometimes George Washington, once in a while Maryland would hold his ardent devotion for a stretch, and there was another season when he allied himself to Catholic University.

But I always suspected that Mr. Marshall always secretly longed for an alma mater that he could call his own. Not that he needed or wanted any higher education but he had a terriffic urge to cheer at athletic contests and he must have felt that his cheers were a little synthetic. There wasn't any special reason why he should get so excited over a Georgetown victory or the defeat of some outsider by G. W. U. yet he enjoyed getting excited.

He organized various teams to cheer about. nOe was a professional basketball team and there was a report that he spent one entire evening looking for a line to rhyme with "Fight for good old Palace Laundry." Finally he was forced to give up his basketball team. He couldn't find a rhyme.

Appreciative Audience

He still had the urge to cheer, however, so he bought the Boston franchise in the National Professional Football League. But somehow they didn't entirely appreciate his talents for collegiate enthusiasm in Boston. Not enough of them anyway, and so Mr. Marshall took his team back to Washington where they welcomed him and it with open arms, not to add open mouths.

When the team appears on the polo grounds field on Sunday they will be greeted by familiar voices singing:

"Fight on, fight on, till you have won Sons of Wash-ing-ton, rah, rah, rah."

For there will be at least 10,000 loyal Washington rooters in the cheering sections. They are coming up by a caravan of special trains, in special party cars. Some of these cars will be crowded with members of different organizations. But others will be just informal groups of frienrs. However, in order to get special cars the groups had to represent something and so they borrowed the names of the Washington players for the occasion. Thus on car will b mad up of th Erni Pinckert Club, another of the Sammy Baugh clubs, another the Ray Flaherty Club.

No college, playing an out-of-town game, ever carrier so many royal rooters along and they will be bringing all the trimmings with them, including, besides their marching song, the usual array of feathers, pennants, colors and girls.

Oh, yes, the girls. There always are pretty girls at college football games, so the Redskins are bringing along the two prettiest girls in Washington just to keep up the collegiate atmosphere. And they will have a parade up the avenue when they arrive.

George Preston Marshal, who always wanted something to cheer about, finally has it. And there are a lot of pepole cheering with him. Which is the——

Justa a minute, there's the telephone . . . hello, what's that? Calling? All right, go ahead . . . What? Can I get a couple of tickets for the Giants-Redskins game? Sure, I think so . . . They're lal sold out down there, eh? . . . Well, I think I can take care of it here all right.

A.A.U. Convention Opens Here Today; To Pass On Records

144 Marks Up Before Conclave

Golden Anniversary Meet at Willard 400 Delegates Here Three-Day Event

By John D. Paulus,

The fastest mile man ever has run, Glenn Cunningham's 4:04.4 on an indoor track, is among the 144 records, made by American athletes this year, that will go under the miscroscope of the Amateur Athletic Union's golden anniversary convention opening here today at the Willard Hotel.

Meetings of the various governing committees top the agenda today with the convention proper scheduled for tomorrow and Sunday. Four hundred delegates are on hand.

These committees will pass upon all record applications in track and field, swimming, boxing, wrestling, ice hockey and all other sports under A. A. U. jurisdiction.

High Spot of Meeting

The high spot of the meeting will be the golden anniversary banquet on Saturday night as the great amateur organization marks the fiftieth milestone since its founding in 1888.

Announcement of the record list was made by Chairman Paul R. Jordan through the offices of Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris. Each figure approved automatically will become an American record. Thus, although Cunningham's performance may be sanctioned, it probably will not hold up as a world's record. The International Amateur Athletic Federation does not recognize indoor clockings for world standards.

However, the Kansan's record is the best of the imposing list registered in 1938. The list is slightly longer than that of 136 records of a year ago. With the exception of Cunningham's mark, the list does not have as many sensational performances as in previous seasons.

Possibly the only track and field record that will be turned over to the international group for world approval will be the 440-yard relay clocking of 0:40.5 by a University of Southern California team composed of Leland La Fond, Bill Anderson, Payton Jordan and Adrian Talley. It is three-tenths of a second under the listed world standard which another Trojan combination established in 1931. They were Roy Delby, Milt Maurer, Maurice Guyer and Franck Wyckoff.

The outstanding individual performance to come before the group is Ralph Flanagan's imposing list of 14 records. Ben Johnson, of Columbia, is another with a list of eight sprint records.

Leading Women

Following are two outstanding women: Mrs. Katherine Rawls Thompson, who clipped seven figures in the free-style, breast-stroke and individual medley, and Miss Halina Tomski, of the Detroit A. C., with 6.

A breakdown of the records shows: Men's track and field, 57; men's swimmers, 41; women swimmers, 37; women's track and field, 2; weight lifters, 6, and horseshoe pitchers, 1.

The all-important outdoor track and field championships have three bidders, Lincoln, Milwaukee and San Francisco. Outdoor and indoor swimming meets for both men and women have applications on file from Detroit, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, New York, Los Angeles and Indianapolis. Los Angeles would like to hold both men's and women's outdoor aquatic meets at the same time, invite foreign talent and have a swimming event second only to the Olympic Games.

Boston, San Francisco and New York are in the field for the boxing and San Francisco seeks the wrestling. Other applications have been made by Lake Placid for bobsledding, Wichita for women's basketball, Denver for men's basketball, New York and Boston for the marathon, San Francisco and New York for handball, San Francisco for gymnastics and 15 cities for the various junior swimming events.

Consideration of the 77 proposed amendments to the constitution, by-laws and both general and athletic rules as well as the 144 record applications will engage the attention of the delegates for many hours. Most important proposed change is the abandonment of the metric system for track in favor of yards.

Warren High Beats Luray

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Dec. 1.—Warren County High School defeated Luray High School, 26—0, here this afternoon in the final football game of the season for both teams. The game, scheduled for November 25, was postponed twice because of a snow-covered field. This was Front Royal's first victory over Luray in any branch of sport.

Warren scored its first touchdown late in the second period when McFall crossed the goal after gains by Marchi, Hidgson and Ohler had carried the ball to the five-yard line.

The most sensational play came in the third period when McFall received a Luray punt and sprintde 75 yards into the end zone.

Warren scored two more touchdwons in the final quarter on forward passes, McFall to Marchi and Wines. McFall converted twice by kicks.

For Luray, Cave, Campbell and Bradford were the outsanding players. Eckardt, D. Burke, Saffell and Hite played a strong defensive game for Front Royal.

D. C. Pros Beaten by Jersey Reds

Score Is 39 to 34 Phil Rabin Stars Scores 21 Points D. C. Behind All Way

The Heurich Brewers, Washington's entries in the American Professional League, bpened their home season inauspiciously last night when they suffered a 39-34 defeat at the hands of the Jersey Reds, last year's pro champions.

Phil Rabin, forward for the invaders and the league's leading scorer for the past two years, scored 21 of his team's 30 points to easily take the evening's individual laurels.

The Washington player who did most of the work for the Brewers was Art Zahn, guard. He scored five baskets and four fouls for a total of 14 points.

Schoenfield's inability to find the basket in the first part of the contributed to the Heurich team's downfall.

The teams played three 15-minute quarters with Heurich threatening to take the lead in the final stanza with the score 37-34 in favor of the invaders. Rabin, however, snared the ball and scored a last-minute goal to register. He was awarded a foul on an interference play but missed the tally.

Jimmy Irwin, a Well-Known Pilot, Says Buck Everett Is Set to Fight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Somewhat short of breath, nonplussed, perplexed and red-eyed with belligerency, Jimmy Erwin, the old cavalry jockey and manager of Buck Everett, arrived in town yesterday for a brief visit, and remained long enough to cast a few aspersions at Everett's critics.

"I can't understand all this hullabaloo about Buck's condition and ability. What started it, and who's behind it? We have nothing to hide, and never have tried to cover up anything. Buck's as honest as a looking glass, and as reliable as a Government bond.

"He's never made any bad fights here, has he? He never quit, or took a dive, or figured in any phony affairs, did he? He's never done it in any other rings, so why start here? We aren't getting a million dollars for this fight, just a small purse, and Buck can't afford to be a party to a "business" fight. Boxing's the only thing he knows, the only means of earning a livelihood he has, so why should he take a chance on being set down for life by doing something wrong?"

"Look at his record. Did he quit to Bob Tow, or Marty Gallagher, or Natie Brown? Were those fights in the bag? It makes you feel sick and disgusted when somebody tries to make a thief and a bum out of a boy like Buck, and I can't help but feel sore.

"But all this stuff in the papers has helped Buck in a way. He's so blamed mad now I really expect to see him knock out Boyd. He'll beat him anyway—Buck's too experienced for him, and too smart, but now I think he'll knock him out in the bargain. "Hard Luck" Hardin stayed ten rounds with Boyd last week, didn't he? Well, Buck stiffened Hardin in four heats—and he'll do the same to Mr. Boyd Monday night, or my name ain't Erwin."

Everett worked eight rounds yesterday, and will taper off the rest of the week. Erwin, who is promoting in Birmingham, was scheduled to leave for home early this morning, returning Sunday to work in Everett's corner.

Boyd, meanwhile, is putting the finishing touches to his work at Stillman's gym, New York, and will not arrive in Washington until Monday in time for the weighing-in formalities that afternoon.

Griff Denies Krakky Trade

Yanks Interested Offer Never Came

Rumors that the New York Yankees have made overtures to Washington for young Joe Krakauskas, prize rookie southpaw, were scoffed at last night by Clark Griffith, Nat prexy.

"That's all bunk," quoth Mr. Griffith. "All bunk. They haven't made an offer for the boy and wouldn't get anywhere if they did. You can disregard that rumor."

Usually well informed sources said the Yanks had offered Griffith Pitcher Spud Chandler and Infielder Bill Knickerbocker, in addition to a serious lump of sugar, in exchange for the blond southpaw's official papers. This, it was rumored, would pave the way for Cecil Travis' trade to Detroit in exchange for Rudy York, whom Griffith is supposed to want for the first base job.

The gist of it is that Knickerbocker would supplant Travis and Chandler, a good right-hander, would offset the loss of Krakauskas. New York is reported desperately in need of a young southpaw to back up the ageing Gomez, and that Manager Joe McCarthy has his Irish heart set on acquiring Krakauskas.

Charity Game Officials Selected

Good Group Chosen for Big Game

Both Teams Busy Limit Is 114 Lbs. Chest to Benefit Boys in Earnest

Definite assurance that Sunday's Charity Bowl football game between Police Boys Club No. 4 and a band of 100-pound grid greats called the Northwest All-Stars will be well officiated was given yesterday as Harry O'Meara, D. C. Commissioner of Football Officials, appointed men to work the game.

The referee will be Catholic University's former star, Tom Whalen, whom observers call one of the best young officials on the list. Whalen has been on duty at numerous grid clashes this neason and there has been no complaint if his method of handling the players.

Another alumnus of C. U., John Jankowski, will handle the tape in the head linesman's job. Umpire and field judge will be Bus Hallett, graduate of Virginia U., and Artie Boyd, present mentor at tEastern High and former Maryland mainstay, respectively.

The Northwest All-Stars, meanwhile, were beginning to worry about weight as they went through a lengthy offensive drill on their Wisconsin avenue field. The weight limit, as agreed upin by both teams, is 114 pounds, a fact the growing lads begin to despise. Some potential stars may be lost for the Griffith Stadium classic because of the scales.

A new angle was unearthed when it was discovered that Tom Clayton, line coach of the Stars, really has his heart and mind on wrestling. The former Tech and Maryland U. gridder at present holds the amateur grappling championship of Maine, and is chairman of the A. A. U. wrestling committee. He even claims a fall on the District's mat impressario, Promoter Joe Turner. His gridiron background, however, will be all he needs to bring the Stars' line into shape.

The game is being played as a benefit for the Community Chest. The stadium, services of the coaches and the efforts of the young gladiators have all been given gratis.

The lads are all earnest about the encounter, however, and have been practicing diligently for it. Although the teams are small, sports circles anticipate a great deal of action Sunday.

Horrell Chosen As Grid Coach At U. C. L. A.

Los Angeles, Dec. 1 (AP).—Edwin C. (Babe) Horrell, former University of California center star and since 1930 assistant football coach at University of California at Los Angeles, late today was named head coach at U. C. L. A. to succeed William H. Sapulding.

Ray Richards, line coach the past year under Spaulding and former Nebraska star, was retained on the staff, and James (Jim Blewett, coach of the championship Manual Arts High School here and prominent Pacific Coast Conference grid officials, was named to round out the staff.

All three were signed to two-year contracts, but salary terms were not disclosed.

Play Title Game

The 115-pound class football teams of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 4 and No. 5 will play for a championship game Saturday at 3 p. m. at the Gonzaga Field. Both teams are very strong this season and the game Saturday afternoon is expected to attract a big crowd.

Bill Ackerman

—on Fishing

We have wondered, during the past several years, at the long trips anglers would take to get several hours or a day's fishing, and gloried in their ability to take them. With each passing year we also have gone farther and farther afield, until we are receiving daily reports of the sport from Nova Scotia to Key West so that they may know just what to expect at some distant point.

ACKERMAN.

Yet the greatest surprise came during this past week, when anglers continued right through the bitter cold to haunt the Middle ground off Point Lookout to get in the last possible day of the excellent fishing the school of striped bass has been supplying.

In spite of fingers numbed almost to uselessness from hours out in this most exposed place in the whole of Chesapeake Bay, they brought in large catches, that in some cases ran as high as 70. The individual stripers often run as large as 20 pounds.

There it is, and take it for what you think it is worth. It might last another week or two, and again it might be all over before you can get down there again, for, with no food fish, and the water temperatures dropping many degrees daily, it doesn't seem possible for them to stay near the top very long. By all means, phone before you take the long 90-mile ride down.

The tautog fishing off Messick and Buckroe Beach in the lower bay is in its prime now, but the followers of these winter tackle-busters usually pick their days with care, to make the best of the occasional sun-warmed hours. In open waters, this fishing often lasts through January, but on the whole it takes anglers like those we mentioned above to take it. For our part, we'll take some sheltered stretch in the Bay of Florida for all the angling we will do until next April.

Bass season is closed in streams and ponds above tidewater until next July. That, however, doesn't hold for the Potomac within the District, nor the creeks tributary to it below—Piscataway, Mattawoman, Chicamuxen, Nanjemoy and the Port Tobacco River, where it is possible to fish as long as the bass will take a minnow, which should be for several weeks.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of Ike Waltons is staging another of its most interesting turkey shoots on Sunday, at the usual place—just a mile out of Bethesda, on the Rockville pike. Either shotguns or rifles are in order, if you want to take home one or more of the many turkeys, the one restriction being iron sights. And, of course, that personal limitation—your ability to put the lead in that 2-inch eye.

We know of one fellow who was so good last year that he didn't cash in his last order until just a few days ago. And look out for him, because he will probably be out Sunday to lay in a fresh supply, and as well on the Sunday, two weeks hence, for the Xmas shoot.

Members and prospective members of the National Capital Casting Club should attend the full meeting that is to be held Monday at 8 p. m. in the Fairfax room of the Willard to act upon the movement for a new pool and clubhouse and the Eastern Atlantic Angling Clubs tournament to be held here in 1939.

There will be items of interest for the ladies, and you are urged to bring them along, for they will have a chance to cash in on a fine compact, while the others are drawing for a door prize of a Shakespeare Tournament Reel.

At Blakely Pond, near Beaufort, N. C., last week, hunters got their limit bag of wildfowl so early in the day in Core Sound they spent the remaining time catching drum in the surf. Take a tip and carry your fishing kit along if you expect to do any hunting in the North Carolina sound country.

Capt. Ed Dowling, the Palm Beach big-game fishing guide, was in Washington this week for a few days before leaving to get his sport fisherman, "Marlin," ready for the coming season. He has been making a speciality of the Walker Cay grounds, 110 miles northeast of Palm Beach on the outer rim of the Bahama Grand Bank, and is more enthusiastic than ever about these new fishing grounds.

Fish are still being taken in the pound nets at Ocean City. The latest it has even been known, so it is little wonder anglers fishing the Carolina coast are having such exceptional luck, even though, in the latter place, it is possible to take black drum throughout the year.

A whole carload, or in actual numbers, some 10,000 large-mouth black bass and brem from a United States Bureau of Fisheries hatchery, will arrive here early Monday morning for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America. Instead of releasing them in their own Montgomery County streams, Bill Leetch and some 15 or 20 of his cohorts will help members of the Prince Georges County Conservation Club release these gamesters in Prince George's streams.

Terps Named For Penn Tilt

Ten Men on Trip Play Tomorrow Squad Reduced

Maryland's basketball tema, the first among the local collegiate group to see real action, will take ten men to Penn State tomorrow for an exhibition with the Nittany Lions.

Coach Burton Shipley, of the Terps, has picked George DeWitt and Adam Bengoechea, forwards; Eddie Johnson, center, and George Knepley and Pershing Mondorff, guards, to start tomorrow's tilt. He also will take along Bill Ray, Francis Beamer, Bill Bryant, Dick Shaffer and Hefty Frey as his reserves.

Shipley, who reduced his squad yesterday, will retain a dozen players, the two others being Frank Dwyer and Gene Ochsenreiter.

Knepley, who was all-Southern Conference last season; Johnson and Frey, who is out for the varsity for the first time, are seniors; Bengoechea, Mondorff, Ray and Beamer are juniors, while DeWitt, who stands 6 feet 2 inches, Shaffer, Dwyer and Ochsenreiter are sophs. Bryant, also a senior, did not play last season after making his letter the year before.

All the starters, Ochsenreiter, Frey and Bryant, have been practicing for some time, but the others did not join the squad until the first of the week, having been engaged in football.

Maryland will play three other games prior to the holidays, visiting Richmond U. on December 13 and playing host to Clemson and Davidson on December 15 and 16. All three games are Southern Conference contests.

Eastern Set To Defend Cage Crown

Have New Coach He's Jack McBride Replaces Mike Kelly Team Almost Set

A complete new order of things will be in effect at Eastern High this year as the Lincoln Parkers prepare to defend the 1937 basketball crown they won without the loss of a single game. Besides a turnover in actual man power which is likely to leave the devastating White Tide somewhat weaker than last year, changes are to be made in other phases of thec ourt game.

In the first place, a new mentor has been appointed to grind basketball into the East Capitol Sstreeters. He is John B. MacBride, native of Indiana's hotbed of basketball players, Davis County. MacBride has taught at Eastern for three years, this being his first year in charge of cagemen, however. He replaces Mike Kelly and Chief Guyon, the former coach of last year's winner.

Team Almost Set

Of particular joy to White cagers, however, wil probably be the fact that they have their own gymnasium this year. Last year they were forced to travel downtown every day to workout at one of the boys clubs. It's a huge hall, almost as large as Tech's, with the new folding seats.

"There'll be no individual stars on my team," he said. "The whole club will be no better than the poorest player on the first string." The statement cleared up one of the outstanding objections to the type of play of last year's champions.

MacBride revealed that no less than 76 men had answered his call to the courts. Of these, he thinks 15 will be about equally talented. "Soup" Hancock, the only one of the five men who played most of Eastern's games last year to return, will be aided by such veterans as "Bap" Battiste, former member of the St. John's Club which tromped Eastern last year; Lenny Mills, a tall, rangy center who played with Tech two years ago; John Tasulli and Les Cooksey, two of the few substitutes used in 1937, and several other better-than-average sharpshooters. A dark horse may turn up in the person of a New Jersey lad, only recently enrolled, of whom fine things are said. The best of the crop coming up from junior high, MacBride said, are Earhart, Reino, Fusco, Hartley and Frain.

Eastern plays a schedule of 17 games, six of them interhigh contests. If the Tide gets in the playoff, to be staged between the four top-ranking teams, that, of course, will increase the schedule. St. John's, its traditional and bitter enemy, will be met early on the card, on January 13 in the afternoon. This may do away with the fine gate turned over to Eastern after last year's night game. A home-and-home agreement has been reached with George Washington High of Alexandria, and Gonzaga is on the list twice.

The schedule:

San Jose Seeks Rutgers for Game

San Jose, Calif., Dec. 1 (AP).—San Jose State College, planning a post-season football game here December 26, placed Rutgers University on the list of possible opponents today.

Gil Bishop, graduate manager, said a telegram from Rutgers officials indicated they were keenly interested in playing in the Far West.

Originally San Jose State opened negotiations with Memphis Teachers' College. "Feelers" also were sent to the University of Mississippi and Georgetown.

Selection of an opponent was expected to be made soon.

'Fresh' Sooners Will Face Vols

Norman, Okla., Dec. 1 (AP).—The University of Oklahoma Sooners have been too good for all their grid foes this year, but they aren't going to be too "fine" when they catch Tennessee in Miami's Orange Bowl January 2.

Knowing that would be too bad, Coach Tom Stidham has ordered his boys to forget about football for two weeks after the Washington StaSte game here Saturday to keep them from going stale.

Win, lose or draw, the squad will be dismissed after the intersectional clash with the Pacific Coast team and will not report for practice again until December 17.

Metropolitan

"Men With Wings," Technicolor's first adventure among the clouds, yesterday inaugurated a repeat downtown week as chief screen feature of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater. Lent new vividness and realism by the wizardry of natural color photography, this Paramount production is always eye-filling, frequently thrilling and with only slight interruptions, romantically interesting.

The whole history of aviation in this country is traced through the action of the picture, from the Kitty Hawk days of the Wright Brothers to Howard Hughes and the clipper ships of the present. This historical pageant of aviation is not always as continuous or as complete as a case-hardened technician might wish, but it is sufficiently authentic to serve its intended background purpose, even if sketchily.

There is a strong vein of romance running through the story of the three childhood friends who grew up from their kite-flying days to become ardent advocates of aeronautical development. One of the lads grows into a hopeless victim of the lust to fly adventurously, dangerously and, in the end, fatally. The other is the ground mechanician and engineer who puts the theories of his pal into practical execution. The third of the trio is the girl both men love. She marries the reckless flier and lives a life of perpetual sacrifice. The lives of these three are threaded together by incidents and events that combine sensational flying, much high humor, suspense and dramatic contrast.

The pivotal roles are effectively played by Fred MacMurray, Louise Campbell and Ray Milland, with Andy Devine, as the "grease monkey;" Lynne Overman, Porter Hall, Walter Abel, Virginia Weidler, Donald O'Connor, Billy Cook and Willard Robertson contributing generously to the support.

"Men With Wings," perhaps, do not quite come off as a stupendous "epic," but it scores enormously as one of

'Great Waltz' Glides Into Second Week

Palace Holds Musical Boasts Three Stars
Story of Strauss

Proving itself as popular as the well-loved Strauss music it serves to celebrate, "The Great Waltz" glided yesterday into a second week at the Palace Theater.

The story of the film ignores the historically interesting facts of the younger Strauss and his battle with his jealous father for the title of "Waltz King" of Vienna. Instead, an imaginative tale in the democratic spirit of the times haunts the streets of the old Vienna we see.

Johann Strauss is a bored bank clerk penning waltzes underneatn his ledger. This dilatory bookkeeping rates him a prompt dismissal and he is off to visit his lady love, Poldi. Suddenly he decides to organize an orchestra with some of his unemployed musical friends. This is a quick success when Carla, a reigning opera star, takes a liking to the handsome composer. Soon his waltzes are the rage of Vienna, but he realizes that, for the sake of Poldi—by now his wife—his affair with the opera singer must end. The climax develops when Poldi takes action herself.

In the course of the story occurs one of the most fanciful inventions yet seen in musical films. Strauss and Carla are driving in the Vienna woods and the singing of the birds, the clumping rhythm of the horses' hoofs, the crisp sound of the driver's bugle, and the shepherds' pipes gradually combine to create, with Strauss and Carla excitedly putting them together, the "Tales of the Vienna Woods."

Introduces New Star

Another particularly original scene is at the beginning of the film when the new conductor-composer demonstrates his revolutionary ideas on the waltz and its quickened tempo in "I Love Vienna." The merry, light-hearted spirit of this scene shows that Director Julien Duvivier can be as successful with crowds as he was with subtle character delineation in the recently seen "Un Carnet de Bal" ("Life Dances On"). Near the close of the film comes the famous second-act finale of "Die Fliedermaus" in which one of the stars of the film brings a highlight to musical films.

And now there will be a brief pause for a tremendous splash while your reviewer goes overboard for Miss Korjus.

She is a statuesque blonde, blue of eye, white of throat and so sensible a singer as to open her mouth while she sings. As the operatic Carla, Miss Korjus is one of the events of the year.

Fernand Gravet is Strauss and the wistful Luise Rainer the serene Poldi. Lionel Atwill, Herman Bing, Hensy Hull, Al Shean and Minna Gombell are among those in the supporting cast in which, to this onlooker at least, the only misfit was Hugh Herbert.

"They're Always Caught," one of the excellent "Crime Does Not Pay" series, is also on the Palace bill, as well as a Terry-Toon cartoon and the ultimate shout in newsreels.

Columbia

Witty Ogden Nash and experienced Scenarist Jane Murfin have produced an excellent screen adaptation of "The Shining Hour," in which Joan Crawford and Margaret Sullavan yesterday led a sterling cast into a return downtown engagement at the Columbia Theater.

The lines, both witty and sincere, give Miss Crawford the finest opportunity she has had in many celluloid semesters. The story permits her to dance; to rise from Tenth Avenue to a first family in the skilled Crawford manner. The dialogue is crisp and natural. The soft-spoken Miss Sullavan is as excellent a performer as ever, and, although she is a more skilled actress than the striking Joan, the latter's part is the "meatier," and Miss Crawford—thoroughly in her metier—makes the most of every speech.

Olivia Riley—born Maggie—is a famed night-club dancer, tired of her cafe-society friends. She accepts Henry Linden's proposal of marriage and goes with him out to the aneestral farm in Wisconsin, determined to love her pleasant husband and his staid background. Made uncomfortable by the unbending attitude of Henry's maiden sister, she falls in love with her already infatuated brother-in-law, David. Judy, David's wife and childhood friend, senses the situation and attempts to solve it.

As the interfering sister, Fay Bainter, after her lengthy stardom on the stage, is so skilled an actress that she will very likely go on playing acidulous trouble-makers until some aroused filmgoer, like the hissing woman who sat back of your reviewer, finally follows up her threat to string her up. Robert Young is David, and plays with his customary polish. Melvyn Douglas does equally well with Henry.

Others in the cast include Frank Albertson, Hattie MacDaniel and Harry Barris, who performs briefly and to the point at the piano.

While the feature film is distinctly of adult appeal, a serial of interest to all ages unwinds to a triumphant conclusion on the Columbia's screen this week. Dick Tracy . . . flash . . . come to a complete and triumphal reward in the fifteenth installment.

The inevitable cartoon is on the bill as surely as the newsreel, with some ten-day old football games—although this latter will be remedied tomorrow when the latest newsreel appears.

RKO-Keith's Presents Saga of Country Doctor

Is Fine Drama of Simple Humanity
Has Able Cast Without Great 'Star'
News Notes of the Theater

"A MAN TO REMEMBER." RKO-Radio picturization of Katharine Haviland-Taylor's story of "Failure," adapted to the screen by Dalton Trumbo, featuring Anne Shirley, Edward Ellis and Lee Bowman, with William Henry, Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs, Frank M. Thomas, Charles Halton, John Wray, Gilbert Emery, Dickie Jones and Carole Lette. Directed by Garson Kanin. Previewed Monday, November 28. At RKO-Keith's Theater

A simple story, simply told, honestly produced, skillfully directed and splendidly acted, about summarizes the qualities of deep human appeal that will impress themselves upon the judicious theatergoers who will attend RKO-Keith's Theater this week to view "A Man to Remember," produced by Robert Sisk for RKO-Radio Pictures.

BELL

"A Man to Remember" is one of those occasional film plays that come along without preliminary fanfare or hullabaloo to reveal a surprising depth of purpose and unsuspected worth as solid and engrossing entertainment. It applies a novel variation of the "flashback" method of story relation to its recital of events. It possesses the courage, furthermore, to open and close on a funeral note—a species of dramatic daring that is seldom risked by play-makers fearful of offending a public taste for the lighter and gayer aspects of drama.

As the picture opens, John Abbott is being buried. His funeral cortege is winding slowly through the streets of the little Midwestern town of Westport to the solemn dirge of the village band. To some of the grieving townsfolk who line the sidewalks all this seems a little ostentatious and out of keeping with the homely simplicity in life of the man who is being honored. To most of them it seems a meager tribute to a man they have grown to love. They are the ones to whom John Abbott's sympathy, kindliness, and generosity had been poured out through the years.

In an upstairs lawyer's office, the three leading citizens of the town—the banker, the storekeeper and the newspaper publisher—are hovering over the Abbott strong box, his only legacy, in dread lest there be not enough "estate" to discharge his debts to them. As the papers in the pitiful little tin box are examined, one by one, each recalls an episode in the doctor's life—and each is the partial symbol of a lifetime of scarifice and unselfish service. We learn in successive incidents, all bound tightly together into a finely moving history of the man and of the town, of the medical miracles he brought about with no profit to himself; how he contrived to persuade the stingy banker to build a hospital as a gift to the city; why he adopted the baby girl left on his doorstep by the father who had deserted her and by what inspired perseverance he saved Westport from an epidemic of infantile paralysis. It is a profoundly moving and inspiring recapitulation of a great spirit and a life of infinite service with no thought of self.

Adding to the dramatic forcefulness of the play is the corollary of the son's seeming indifference to the unpretentious heroism of his father's simple creed of being useful. Richard Abbott also is a doctor, given the advantage of European post-graduate work his father never could afford. The money that might have paid his way through the great Paris medical center furnishes the picture's sharply pointed climax, so vital to the best effect of the pictured drama that it will not be disclosed here.

Although it bristles with no great "names," the cast selected for the leading characters in "A Man to Remember" hardly could have been improved upon. Edward Ellis, long recognized as one of the cinema's most competent character actors—"I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Winterset," "Fury," "Maid of Salem," etc.—appears in the title role and etches a perfect likness of the "country doctor" all who have lived in small towns know so well. Anne Shirley is cast as his foster-daughter and Lee Bowman as his son. Both play naturally and intelligently and supply the picture's needed vein of youthful romance. Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs and Frank M. Thomas, as the hard-shelled money-grubbers of Westport, impersonate three typical, small-town egoists, who come to their senses too late, with complete fidelity to type. Charles Halton, as the lawyer, discloses a fine contempt for their narrow vision in two brief but illuminating scenes. William Henry, John Wray and Gilbert Emery are among the minor players who contribute most effectively to the many homespun virtues of a film play that is big only in the rich humanity of its story and the fidelity with which it has been caught by the cameras.

For this quality of faithfulness and honesty, large credit must go to Director Garson Kanin, who here is intrusted with his first important assignment. The deftness with which he handled "A Man to Remember" should make him one.

Manager Meakin has kept the auxiliary features of Keith's new bill up to the high level of its major feature. That amiable and quaintly ingratiating young sissy, "Ferdinand, the Bull," continues to charm the customers with his flower-sniffing and complete contentment under Munro Leaf's shady cork tree—as translated into one of his best Technicolor cartoons. Especially after he sits down on that bee! Another diverting short-reel subject is the new issue of "Screen Snapshots," in which the activities of a large number of prominent film players are viewed through the eyes of their publicity departments. The Pathe News, with its picturized world events, lends the final fillip to a bill that is heartily recommended to all those to whom "bigness" is not a prerequisite to enjoyment.

Talented Washingtonians, selected after extensive auditions, will realize their "Seceret Ambitions" by making at least one stage appearance each at the Earle Theater, beginning today. Their appearance, under the guidance of Bill Crago, popular N. B. C. announcer, will be an added feature of the regular stage revue, headlined by Dick Foran, singing screen star.

Those chosen for their initial plunge into professional theater, include: Buddy Phillips, 310 E street northwest, singer; Mrs. Myrtle M. Arter, 208 Massachusetts avenue northeast, whistler; Paul Morgan and John Tass, 825 Sixth street southwest, who play harmonica, fiddle and guitar; Arthur Hagestaly, 4002 New Hampshire avenue northwest, violinist; Mrs. Nora Lee Wells, 5213 N. Eleventh road, Arlington, Va., singer; Jack Bowers, 2000 Sixteenth street northwest, rope spinner; Louis Papegeorge and Ace Efantis, 1611 Trinidad avenue northeast, steel and normal guitars; Marian C. Bunch, 2145 N. Quebec street, Cherrydale, Va., singer and tap dancer; Grace Vitality, 18 W. Montgomery avenue, Rockville, Md., singer; Madalynne Cheatham, 220 Allison street northwest, singer; John Frommer, Greenbelt, Md., percussion novelties; Vincente Del Garza, 1319 Massachusetts avenue northwest, singing guitarist; Ray Swann Quartet, 3133 Mount Pleasant street northwest, "Rigoletto" burlesque; Dennis Elwood Gartner, 4026 S. Buchanan street, Arlington, Va., imitator, and Mrs. Rosa Reagan, 1436 W Street northwest, Apt. 5, novelty exercises.

The unique feature of this innovation, contrived by Production Manager Harry Anger, is that these chosen aspirants for stage fame will not all appear at every performance throughout the week. It is the plan to present different specialists at each show. If any proves especially clever and meets with audience reaction to warrant it, the probability is that he, or she, will be put on more than once. That, however, remains to be seen.

In view of the length of "Drums," Alexander Korda's Technicolor feature of the screen bill, the completeness of the vaudeville portion of the entertainment—headlined by Jay C. Flippen—and the elaborate nature of guest conductor D'Artega's overture, an early schedule will be in effect today at Loew's Capitol Theater—and presumably for the full week ahead. Doors at the Capitol will open this morning at 10 o'clock, with the first showing of the feaure scheduld for 10:15. The complete daily schedule will be found in the "Time Table" appearing somewhere nearby on this page. And don't say I didn't tell you!

Francis Farmer, stage and screen star, appearing this week in the leading feminine role in "Golden Boy," at the National, was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Ambassador and Senora de los Rios, at the Spanish Embassy. Miss Farmer and members of the "Golden Boy" cast opened the campaign sponsored by the Central Spanish Relief Committee to raise Christmas gifts for the suffering children of Spain, by presenting their contributions of food, clothing and toys to Ambassador and Senora de los Rios.

On next Sunday, Ambassador and Senora de los Rios will hold open house at the Spanish Embassy, when they will receive Washington children and their parents who wish to contribute to this worthy cause.

What's-in-a-Name Note

If you have been wondering about the title of that revue at the National next week, "Pins and Needles" is what a drama desk thinks it is sitting on when the deadline sneaks up on it from behind!

familiar satirists of vaudeville, who are featured on the stage bill, beginning today at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, in "Opera in the Ruff," which largely explains itself

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 1.

MYSTERY: Still unsettled is the controversy between Arthur Krock Washington correspondent for the N. Y. Times, and Harry Hopkins, the WPA administrator. Krock had reported that a mysterious Mr. X, who was his source, had overheard Hopkins say: "We'll tax and tax and spend and spend and elect and elect" . . . Hopkins denied ever having said this . . . Krock stated that he had checked again with his Mr. X and that the story is true . . . The mysterious Mr. X is famous along Broadway and in the field of entertainment . . . His initials are M. G.

SUCCESS: One of the sponsors of the Lisa Day Nursery benefit show—which will present jai-alai at the Hippodrome tonight, telephoned Diana Barrymore, daughter of John Barrymore, and invited her to be one of the program sellers . . . "A lot of famous people will sell programs," was the lure, "and there'll be many theatrical people there. After all, you've just announced that you're interested in show business—and this may help you get a small role in a play" . . . "I'm sorry," explained Miss Barrymore, "but I'll be busy that night. I've got to go out to Astoria. I'm being screen-tested—for the role of Scarlett O'Hara."

CRIME: The last report of the Citizens Crime Commission tabulated the number of guilty pleas taken in the criminal courts of the city, and —on this quantitative basis—the office of District Attorney Geoghan, in Brooklyn, was rated the best . . The new report will be announced shortly. The ratings therein will be made, not on a quantitative basis, but on the basis of quality . . . The best rating, in this new report, won't go to Geoghan—nor to Thomas E. Dewey.

STRIKE: Last night at El Morocco Doris Duke entered accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Laddie Sanford and Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan. The room was unusually crowded and tables were placed upon the dance floor . . . The waiters, to accommodate the newcomers, placed another table on the floor—and this consumed the last inch of dance space. Just as Gov. Murphy was being seated, a patron who had risen to dance turned to him and asked: "What's this? A sit-down strike?"

FAILURE: The Herald Tribune yesterday, in reporting the petition in bankruptcy filed by the owners of La Conga, described it as "one of the most successful night clubs of the 1937-38 season . . . La Conga was considered by night club proprietors as one of the freak successes of the year . . . It was immediately successful and was among the few night clubs which did a sell-out business until it closed for the summer" . . . The other newspapers printed similar stories . . . As a matter of fact, although La Conga really was crowded and did a sell-out business last season, when it closed for the summer it was $12,500 in the red.

CHALLENGE: Herbert Bayard Swope is a veteran of the information-quiz games. Swope probably can supply the answers to more questions than can any other man in America. On occasion he has written to Professor Quiz, correcting him with regard to answers with which Quiz was satisfied . . . The book, "Ask Me Another," is dedicated to Swope . . . Recently, Swope compiled a list of ten questions and submitted it for use on the "Information Please" program. These questions were considered too tough to be used . . . The program officials, gunning for Swope, have countered with an invitation for him to appear. Swope, as yet, hasn't decided.

Bob Burns built himself a "city house" when he settled down in Hollywood, but the Arkansas Traveler soon discovered that he couldn't write in it; so he built himself a little mountain cabin out on the back lot, and it is here that he works on his various programs.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 1.—During the fire scare, when the whole world seemed to be ablaze out here with real heat—not that warmed over passion we're so fond of calling a flame—the fire was within half a mile of the Lionel Atwells' house on the Riviera. Louise had all her personal belongings on a truck and was busy packing Lionels'. Wishing to know if he wanted his old costumes included, she called to him. And guess what he was doing! With a little garden watering can he was taking care of the flowers in the patio!

HEDDA HOPPER

At the Jack Barrymore menage, things were in a little better shape. Jack had his guns, fishing tackle, Lincoln's letter written to his grandmother, Mrs. John Drew, a sketch done by Gerald Du Maurier of Peter Ibbetson, which Gerald gave Jack the night he opened in London in "Hamlet." Elaine had gathered all her clothes together, including a new evening gown which she hadn't yet worn. And her mother, who had a bad case of hives, not jitters, was busy taking the salve off her face and making it up so she'd present a pretty picture to the firemen. All the time she was urging Jack to shave!

The fire took all Virginia Bruce's trees and scorched her new house which isn't yet finished. While she was out looking at the damage, a load of firewood went by. It was delivered to a neighbor a block away, whose house had been completely burned down.

Jeanette MacDonald found her garden wild with wild animals—which had been driven down from the hills. Among them four red foxes—enough to make her a new fur cape. But not a shotgun in sight.

And Woody Van Dyke 2d, told Woody 3d that the ash raining onto the estate was snow. But the youngster wouldn't bite—he'd seen the old man's tricks before.

News must have been awfully scarce when one of our local grade papers published with much glee that Claudette Colbert and Jack Barrymore were feuding on the "Midnight" set. Maybe I don't know what feuding means, but I've never heard greater mirth and harmony emanating from any set. Every time these two finished a scene, they were in a huddle in a corner, swapping stories about the late Lowell Sherman, Jack's former brother-in-law. The two men were the greatest friends until Lowell married into John's family, then neither of the boys seemed able to take it.

Our local girls should take a sheet from Ina's style book. Ina's been creating styles for years. Her finger nails are a nice lady-like length. She can still fasten the pearls 'round her neck without fear of cutting her own throat.

Speaking of nails, Gypsy Rose Lee has made her success on tour, not with a strip tease act, which seems very old fashioned, but with her eight months' growth of three-inch nails! And Audrey Sutherland won a bet of $50 at the Troc the other night when one of her daggers broke off. The floor was cleared while they located it. The bet was that she couldn't have it pasted back on. She appeared the following night with nail intact and collected the $50.

Stettinius Backs Social Security Act

Urges Public Support
Talks to Life Heads
Commends Insurance

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 1.—Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, praised the principle of the Social Security act in an address to the Association of Life Insurance Presidents convention read today, in his absence, by William Beye, a vice-president of the steel corporation.

"Co-operation in providing a social and economic independence for the individual should be among the major objectives of modern industry," Stettinius said.

He recommended insurance as one of the safeguards of employes' independence and continued:

"Recently, in national legislation, we witnessed the principle of social insurance applied on an unprecedented scale. Without passing on the details of the social security act, and although aware that the machinery may need readjusting, I am convinced that recognition of the principle of social security by the enactment of that legislation represents a great advance—one deeply desired by the people and deserving to be protected by all who cherish the well-being of our social order."

Stettinius said he considered insurance served a purpose for moral welfare, and concluded: "Industrial leadership should stand ready to give an accounting in terms which show it has a moral, as well as financial justification for its stewardship.

Asks Further Advance

"I am convinced, however, that while realization of industry's responsibilities to society is growing, the general welfare calls for even greater progress. Industry must strive to adjust its operations to the highest purposes of life, and, in so doing, it may safely depend upon the wholehearted support, sympathy and understanding not only of our great body of employes and their families but the public as well."

J. L. Ilsley, minister of national revenue, of Canada, told the insurance executives that foreign capital is turning to Canada as a haven of refuge. "Canada's geographical position, remote from the scene of war, her stable institutions and the opportunities for profitable investments . . ." he said, "appear to be acting as a magnet for foreign capital."

Dr. Thomas S. Gates, president of the University of Pennsylvania, suggested insurance companies should combine on a program of unified research directed toward improving health conditions.

"If you are hesitant," Dr. Gates told the insurance executives, "I ask you to think first of your policyholders. Are they going to object if you spend a small fraction of their premiums to promote their chances of longer and happier life?

"Where you have stockholders as well as policyholders, is it or is it not to their interest that dividend possibilities should be bettered by lowering the mortality and morbidity rates? And that minority of the general public which has neither policies nor stock cannot help but benefit."

Life Insurance Peak

Americans who insure their lives—and there are 64,000,000 of them—carry policies averaging $1,725 each. The total, Julian Price, chairman of the convention, disclosed today, will be the greatest in history, $110,300,000,000, by the end of the year.

New life insurance written this year, he estimated, would amount to $11,800,000,000, a figure $2,996,000,000 less than in 1937. Price said policyholders and beneficiaries would receive about $2,600,000,000 this year from the companies. Of this amount $975,000,000 would be paid in death claims, while the remaining 62.5 per cent, $1,625,000,000, would go to living policyholders as matured endowments, annuities, surrender values, policy dividends, and disability payments.

Record Low Death Rate

Death will strike 73,000 fewer blows in the United States this year than last, the association was told. Dr. Harold M. Frost, medical director of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., reporting the results of an association survey, said that the figures indicated that actually 85,000 lives were being saved this year in comparison with 1937.

Asserting that the present death rate among American policyholders was the lowest ever recorded by the association, Dr. Frost said: "In specific figures, 747.9 of each 100,000 policyholders will have died this year, as compared with 794.3 in 1937. This represents an improvement in the death rate of 5.8 per cent; a saving of 46.4 lives for each 100,000 policyholders.

"If the same degree of improvement continues and applies to our general population, we may expect 73,000 fewer deaths in our Nation than last year, despite an increase of population which, had the death rate of 1937 prevailed, would have resulted automatically in 12,000 more deaths."

Cotton Range Only 3 Points

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Cotton held within a 3-point range today. The market closed unchanged to 2 points net lower after March had eased from 8.46 to 8.43 and then recovered to 8.45.

Trade and foreign houses absorbed liquidation and hedge selling at the start. Outside orders were small. Trade business was held down by quietness of textile and spot cotton markets. The Washington legislative outlook, the cotton crop report on December 8 and the cotton referendum two days later all held trades to the sidelines.

Attention was given a speech by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace at Raleigh, N. C., today in which he was reported to have urged cotton farmers to vote for marketing quotas and suggested some modifications of the farm program might be made to recapture export markets.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil was bolstered today by covering in nearby positions and trade buying, encouraged by steadiness of lard and firmness of grains. Final prices were unchanged to 5 points net higher. Sale, 70 contracts. Sales of crude oil were reported at 6¾ cents in the Southeast, with 6¾ bid in the valley and 6¼ in Texas. December closed 7.44, January, 7.52; March, 7.66; May, 7.75; July, 7.83.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Dec. 1 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—Most of a very restricted demand for wool on the Boston market today was on the fine grade. Small quantities of fine territory wools in original bag sold occasionally at 66 to 68 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing lengths, 64 to 66 cents, scoured basis, for average to short French combing lengths and at 61 to 63 cents, scoured basis, for bulk clothing lengths. Scattered sales of 12-month Texas wools were at prices in the range 67 to 72 cents, scoured basis.

Stocks Fall 3.2 Per Cent In November

Steel Shares Gain
Also Railroads
And Rail Equipments

New York, Dec. 1.—Reactionary tendencies in stock prices during November caused the market value of 100 representative common issues to recede $625,419,000, off 3.2 per cent in the month, according to the regular compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. At the close of November the list showed a total valuation of $18,335,067,000. During October stocks had advanced 8 per cent to $18,960,506,000.

Ten component groups of the index recorded losses, while only three showed gains. Among the latter were the steels, which rose 3.7 per cent, the rail equipments, which added 1.5 per cent, and the railroads, which increased 0.4 per cent. Utility shares, with a decline of 8.8 per cent, gave the worst performance, while building shares followed closely with a loss of 7.4 per cent. Food issues dropped 7.1 per cent, electricals 6.8 per cent, mining 5.5 per cent, industrials 3.4 per cent and the oil stock 3 per cent. Smaller losses occurred in the motor, chemical and retail issues.

Steels Head Decline in Curtailed Trading
Tin Plate Producers Make Refunds
Closing Prices Above Day's Lows

New York, Dec. 1.—Stocks finished irregularly lower after blowing hot and cold in a dull session. Volume was restricted to 861,610 shares on the big board. Steels were the only group to yield much ground. Some speculative holdings in this division apparently were lightened on announcement that producers will refund $5 a ton on tin plate business transacted between January 1 and November 10. On the latter date a vertical price cut of $7 a ton was posted, applying through the balance of the fourth quarter and first quarter of 1939. Rebates of $5 a ton on tin plate will, of course, serve to reduce slim profits for 1938 of some companies and extend losses experienced by others.

Bonds moved in much the same groove as stocks, with speculative descriptions generally droopy and high grades fairly steady. Tendency of sterling and French francs to recover in early foreign exchange dealings was halted by the new element of nervousness injected into the European situation by demands by Italian Deputies for areas held by France. The pound was lower on the day, but francs improved a small fraction as the general situation in the republic was reported to have calmed down following break-up of the threatened strike by the military.

Wheat put on a good advance at Chicago, chiefly on the basis of reports that Great Britain has purchased 20,000,000 bushels of United States Government stocks. The close was ⅝ to 1⅛ cents a bushel higher. Cotton was unchanged to 2 points lower.

Opening Higher

December trading in equities opened on a rising note, but buying was too cautious and too small to bring about any substantial bulge. Easier tendencies appeared around midday, when lows for the session were, in the main, recorded. Most issues ended above their lows for the day. Low-priced issues were well represented in the most active department with Loft a leader on sales of 21,800 shares and a last price of 7⅛, up ⅜. International Telephone, Richfield Oil and Transamerica were among the first 15 selling below $10 a share. On the other hand, Bethlehem, off 2 points, and Chrysler, Down 1¼, also included in the active bracket.

Coppers declined fractionally, although news from the metal markets was a trifle more reassuring. Export prices for refined copper again edged upward, but sales for foreign account were much smaller than on Wednesday. Utilities gave ground grudgingly and the same was true of oils. Speculation in the latter is being restrained by prospect of the Washington monopoly investigation. The O'Mahoney committee is expected to turn its searchlights on the petroleum industry soon after the Christmas holidays, with major companies slated for special attention.

Bonds Irregular

Irregular tendencies marked another dull session in the listed bond market today. Best grade investment issued hardly moved. Among speculative rails losses were more numerous than gains, while most local traction securities likewise drifted lower. Foreign bond dealings were marked by some fresh buying of a few German issues. Turnover in all bonds was only $6,290,000, however, for many traders and investors still prefer the sidelines while awaiting legislative and other trends.

Long-term United States Treasury bonds lost most of the small gains registered the previous session, but still are within a point of their highs of the year. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home corporations were dull. Best-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds varied only by smallest fractions and continue to crowd the high records of the year.

Junior Rails Lower

Secondary railroad liens tended to drift lower, and a few bonds dropped a point or more. The majority merely dipped by small fractions, and a sprinkling of gains also was noted. Borderline and default carrier bonds were dull and mostly soft. The local traction group remained fairly active, with profit-taking apparent here and there. Rail holding issues were motionless, but some of the utility holding bonds improved. Industrial convertibles were firm, despite the equity uncertainty.

Foreign bond trading showed only a few bright spots, chiefly among German corporate bonds that dealers hope will obtain the privilege of dollar debt service. Other European default bonds were dull, and the Latin-American variety of disregarded pledges also attracted little interest. Italian and Japanese bonds improved. Best-rated foreigns merely held around former levels.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 1.—Prices were well maintained in the stock market today as traders generally expressed satisfaction over outcome of the French general strike. Transatlantics ended mostly a shade forward. Kaffirs, coppers, oils and rubbers held steady. Rayon shares were strong spots in the industrial group. British funds improved. Japanese loans moved higher.

Paris—International issues sagged in the bourse today. Rentes ended 30 centimes higher to 70 lower and Bank of France lost 105 francs. Suez Canal dipped 295 francs and Royal Dutch 93.

Liverpool—Cotton futures closed 1 to 3 points lower today, although some support appeared in sympathy with the Egyptian market. Business was chiefly local. Scarcity of tenderable grades of wheat for December delivery advanced futures ¼ to ½ penny. The market was irregular early on lower offerings of Manitobas.

Banks Start Savings Clubs For Christmas

More Expected in 1939
7 Millions This Year
Barker Is Chairman

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Memberships in and subscriptions to next year's Christmas Savings Clubs are expected to exceed this year's in number and volume. Clubs for 1939 were started this week in 16 Washington banks, the early opening date being arranged so that members may return some of their savings funds to next year's clubs should they so desire. Distribution of approximately $7,000,000 to 81,000 members is taking place here this year. Next year's clubs will be conducted under practically the same procedure as this year's and no interest will be paid on club deposits.

General information regarding the movement will be made available by the advertising committee of the District of Columbia Bankers Association. According to Willard G. Barker, president of Morris Plan Bank of Washington, and chairman of the committee, the clubs have contributed a great deal in the popularization of banking institutions. Other members of the committee are: Robert L. Flather, American Security & Trust Co.; Eliot H. Thomson, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; E. Percival Wilson, National Savings & Trust Co., and George O. Vass, Riggs National Bank.

Announcement is made of the following Washington institutions opening Christmas Savings Clubs for next year: American Security & Trust Co., Anacostia Bank, Bank of Commerce & Savings, Columbia Ntional Bank, East Washington Savings Bank, Hamilton National Bank, McLachlen Banking Corporation, Morris Plan Bank, Munsey Trust Co., Water Street branch of the National Bank of Washington, National Savings & Trust Co., Riggs National Bank (branches only), Second National Bank, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, Union Trust Co., Washington Loan & Trust Co. Club enrollments will be received until January 7.

Washington Gas Net Gains

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission shows operating revenues of $593,305 for October as compared with $583,156 for October a year ago, an increase of $11,149. Operating expenses decreased $18,882 from $497,769 in October last year to $478,887 this October. Net operating revenues were $114,418 this October, or $30,031 more than for the same month last year. Non-operating revenues showed an increase of $12,113 and the net result of the month's operation after all deductions for interest and amortization was a net income of $56,626 or $42,538 more than for October 1937. The October earnings bring the net income for the ten months ended October 31, up to $610,507 compared with $473,047 for the same period last year.

Defense as a Spur

National defense plans are described as "a business stimulant of first importance in the immediate future," in a monthly survey of the condition of business in the December issue of Banking, publication of the American Bankers Association. "Directly, through prospective spending of $1,000,000,000 in 18 months," the survey reminds, "and indirectly through the mobilization of industry, national defense has occupied a wholly unaccustomed place in the middle of the business picture."

The survey states that improvement has become general and notes that "from the standpoint of business the chief result of the election seems to be a demonstration that business is no longer tied to the apron strings of government. A more influential element in the situation has been observable ever since midyear in the increasing disposition of industrial leaders to go ahead with their plans for expansion without regard to governmental policies. This has been fostered by increasing harmony between governmental agencies and business leaders."

An improvement in business is again reflected in the magazine's cross-section index obtained from a poll of 3,000 bank directors and other businessmen in all sections of the United States and in leading lines of activity. With the November poll showing 39 per cent reporting better business conditions, 34 per cent seeing business as static and 27 per cent reporting a decline, the canvas for the second time this year shows more announcing rise than an unfavorable trend. The October research indicated 35 per cent reporting an upward trend, 37 per cent observing no change and 30 per cent revealing a recession.

Virginia Bankers' Cruise

The forty-sixth annual convention of the Virginia Bankers Association will be held on a cruise to Bermuda, delegates sailing from Norfolk, May 14, on the Queen of Bermuda and returning May 19. Business meetings will be held at sea and the ship, serving at the convention hotel, will remain at Bermuda nearly two full days with opportunity for a shore program, surf bathing and outdoor sports. Arrangements including an entertainment program, will be in charge of Thomas Cook & Son, it is announced.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—General observance of the Thanksgiving Day holiday greatly reduced the volume of bank clearings this week from the preceding full week, but left the total only slightly below the aggregate for the corresponding 1937 period, which also was a holiday week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Britain Buys 20-Million Bu. Of U.S. Wheat

Chicago Prices Rise
Canada Also Exports
Cargo Goes to India

By the Associated Press.

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday that it had arranged for the sale of 20,000,000 bushels of surplus American wheat to flour millers in Great Britain. The sales were made under the Government's export subsidy program designed to place 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in foreign markets before next July.

They said, however, the wheat would be delivered over a period of several months through American exporters. It was indicated that the grain would be sold at competitive world prices, with the Government taking whatever losses are incurred.

Advance in Pit

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Confirmation that 20,000,000 bushels of United States Government-owned wheat had been bought by British millers hoisted Chicago wheat values 1⅝ cents today. Serving also as a stimulus were Canadian export sales of about 1,000,000 bushels, including a cargo to India, the first time in many years that India has obtained wheat from North America. The British purchases of United States wheat were made from the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, and were said to represent about a tenth of Great Britain's annual average of imports.

Virtually all of the day's price upturns were maintained in United States markets, but Winnipeg quotations lagged. A reason assigned was that disposal of wheat from this country to England would likely cut into Canada's export prospects.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1½ cents higher compared with yesterday's finish; December, 63⅛ to 63; May, 66⅜ to 63½; corn, ⅝ to ⅝ up; December, 47⅝; May, 51⅜ to 51½; oats, ⅛ to ¼ advanced; rye showing ⅜ to ⅝ climb, and provisions unchanged to a bulge of 2 cents.

Jellyfish, Taffy Flourish far From Sea Water

Salt-water taffy, sand and jellyfish are inseparable in the mind of nearly every visitor to the seashore, writes French Schunk in Nature Magazine. However, it is not unusual for the candy to be made in kitchens no nearer to the sea than Philadelphia, while at least one jellyfish is a fresh-water species found even in the lakes of prairie States. In fact, when placed in salt water this odd coelenterate almost instantly collapses and soon dies. Fifteen minutes in salt water is surely fatal.

During June of 1880 small active jellyfish were found swarming in the jelly tank of the Royal Botanical Society in London. Up to that time no fresh-water jellyfish was known to exist and this abundant supply caused great interest among scientists, both because of the unique habitat and certain peculiarities of behavior.

From the number of stations and their wide distribution it is probable that the fresh-water medusa is a fairly common species, but as yet scientists are delighted when they find it and quickly report the discovery in their periodicals. So far it has been collected in Pennsylvania, Georgia, New York, Louisiana, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa and the District of Columbia.

Bridge

MY DEAR, I HOPE YOU'RE NOT ONE OF THESE SERIOUS PLAYERS—I SIMPLY HATE GRIM BRIDGE—WELL, AS I WAS SAYING, YOU REMEMBER THAT MONKEY-JACKET I WORE AT LILLIAN'S PARTY? THE ONE TRIMMED WITH GOLD SEQUINS? WELL, YOU SIM-PLY WON'T BELIEVE IT, BUT GRACE HAS ONE EXACTLY LIKE IT, ONLY HERS IS TRIMMED WITH—NO! DON'T TELL ME GRACE COPIED YOURS! WELL, YOU'RE NOT THE ONLY ONE. SHE WAS WILD ABOUT THAT BLACK CRÊPE DINNER DRESS OF MINE, AND IT WASN'T TWO WEEKS BEFORE SHE HAD ONE JUST LIKE IT. YOU KNOW HOW HEAVY SHE IS—WELL, YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN HER IN IT—A MESS

Bob Burns Says—

Some narrow-minded people seem to resent the fact that when there is dangerous action moving picture stars use doubles in the picture. I think doubles deserve a lot of credit, but I don't think we should feel sorry for them because they actually like their work and they appreciate a star throwing work their way.

One day a big apartment house here in Hollywood caught fire and a famous actress came out of her window and stood on the ledge of the seventh floor with flames lickin' all around her. The firemen stood below her with the net spread, but she didn't move. Finally they hollered, "Jump, lady, jump!" The actress looked down at 'em indignantly and said, "I'll do nothin', of the kind! Send for my double at once!"

Farm Co-ops Urged To Build Reserves

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—Farmers' co-operatives can build more efficient organizations if they guard against putting too much of their capital into physical facilities and paying out excessive dividends when they should be creating reserves, the Blacksburg session of the annual Virginia Co-op School was told today.

F. B. Bomberger, president of the Baltimore Bank for Co-operatives, warned his more than 100 listeners that a sound co-operative cannot be built on immediate turnover.

Mrs. . M. Peck, president of the Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs, presided over the opening session.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—"A navy that can stop any navy or all navies off the shores jof our Nation before they get here," was advocated by National Legion Commander Stephen F. Chadwick at a dinner given for him here last night by 400 Virginia legionnaires.

That, he said, would be the way to stop "aggression before it becomes invasion."

Chadwick was given a welcome at the dinner by Gov. Price, Representative Dave Satterfield of the Third Virginia District, and State Legion Commander Fred Parks, of Abingdon.
